NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

THE SICKLES TRAGEDY.

Trial of Daniel E. Sickles for the Murder of Philip Barton Key.

EIGHTEENTH DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, April 24.

The case is drawing fast to a close. To-morrow morning, Mr. BRADY will argue for the defence on the instructions, and will occupy two hours. Mr. OULD will follow for the prosecution, and will occupy an hour and a half. The Judge will then either deliver his instructions or defer them to Tuesday, which latter is most probable. If the Judge's charge shall prove impartial, counsel on both sides will waive summing up, and let the case go to the jury. A verdict may be had to-morrow, or early on Tuesday. If the charge is not deemed impartial the summing up may occupy until Friday. Mr. SICKLES' friends are in high hopes and spirits.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, April 23.

Whether owing to the tempestuous condition of the weather or whether it be an indication that the interest in this protracted trial is subsiding, the pressure for admittance into the Court-room is by no means so great as on the previous day.

The general impression yesterday seemed to be that the trial would be concluded to-day, but it is now thought that the argument on the instructions will be so spun out as to prevent that consummation.

Ex-Senator Brodhead, who was attached as absent witness, is in Court in the custody of the Marshal's officers.

Col. Wm. Schouler, of Boston, is also in attendance, having been telegraphed by the prosecution to come as witness.

The Judge was in Court somewhat earlier than usual, but the District-Attorney did not arrive till half past ten.

Previous to his arrival Mr. Carlisle notified the Judge that Mr. Brodhead was in Court, and explained the cause of his not having been here before. He was subpœnaed on the 7th of April to attend on the 4th and on the 4th he received a letter from the Deputy-Marshal requiring his attendance here the same day. The evidence being satisfactory, the attachment was discharged.

Richard Brodhead, examined by Mr. Carlisle—I am acquainted with Mr. Sickles, though not intimately; I saw him the day of the homicide; I was walking out and met my friend Haldemar, of Harrisburgh, and we walked together; we called at Judge Black's to see him, and were shown to the back parlor; we were seated but for a moment or two when Mr. Sickles came in; after shaking hands with him, I introduced him to Mr. Haldemar, who is editor of a Democratic paper at Harrisburgh; a few words passed between Mr. Sickles and Mr. Haldemar on the subject of Pennsylvania politics, but very few; which commenced the conversation I cannot tell; I called Mr. Sickles' attention to some mud on his boots, and remarked that he was unfortunate in crossing the street; he said he was and would take it off, and he stepped out to do so; Mr. Haldemar observed after he left the room—

Mr. Brady—No; leave that out.

Witness—He returned in a very short time, but had scarcely taken his seat when I heard footsteps on the stairs; he immediately arose and stepped out as if to meet the person who I thought was Judge Black; he was out some time; in a minute or two Judge Black came in very much excited; I asked him what was the matter.

Mr. Brady—Asked who?

Witness—Judge Black.

Mr. Brady—Was Mr. Sickles present?

Witness—No.

Mr. Brady—Then say nothing about it.

Witness—Mr. Sickles was out some time; where he was I do not know; after awhile he came into the back parlor from the front parlor; Mr. Haldemar and myself stepped up to him, Mr. Haldemar acting as spokesman; seeing that he was without friends, Mr. Haldemar tendered him our services to go with him to the magistrate's; he thanked us; I asked him if it was a bailable offence; he said he did not know, but that if all the facts were known, it would be; he then added: "For God knows I would be justified," or, "I could not help it;" which was the precise expression he used, I cannot now remember; by this time Mr. Gillette came in, and I think Mr. Butterworth also; some one asked whether Mr. Key was dead; Mr. Butterworth answered: "Yes;" I do not know who asked that; Mr. Sickles then muttered something about there being "one wretch less in the world," and seemed considerably excited; the carriage having been sent for, and his New-York friends having arrived, Mr. Sickles left Judge Black's, and Mr. Haldemar and myself remained; that is the last I saw of Mr. Sickles; I believe I have stated all the facts that now occur to my mind.

Mr. Carlisle to Mr. Brady—He is your witness, gentlemen.

Mr. Brady—I have nothing to ask, Sir.

The witness made an explanation to the Judge of his non-attendance in obedience to the subpœna, and the Judge declared it satisfactory.

Mr. Haldemar, the other witness attached, not being in attendance, the District-Attorney declared the testimony closed on the part of the United States.

Mr. Brady—Our testimony is closed.

The Judge—You are closed on both sides?

Mr. Brady—Yes.

Mr. Carlisle—I would state that the District-Attorney left the room shortly after the adjournment of the Court, and your Honor knows his residence is in Georgetown. I therefore had no opportunity of conferring with him. At a late hour last night, after ten o'clock, I received a copy of the points on which the defence mean to rely—not in the nature of instructions, but in the form of law.

The Judge—I will give time to the District-Attorney to examine them.

Some minutes were passed in the examination, by Mr. Ould and Mr. Carlisle, of the instructions prayed by the defence, during which interval Mr. Sickles' counsel conferred together and with the prisoner.

Mr. Carlisle proceeded to read the instructions which the prosecution would ask the Court to give the jury. [Published in the TIMES of April 16.]

The following instructions, as prepared by the District-Attorney, were copied, he said, verbatim from the instructions given by his Honor in the case of Day:

If the jury believe from the evidence that the deceased was killed by the prisoner by means of a leaden bullet discharged from a pistol, such killing implies malice in law, and is murder.

That the burden of rebutting the presumption of malice by showing circumstances of alleviation, excuse or justification, rests on the prisoner, and it is incumbent on him to make out such circumstances to the satisfaction of the jury, unless they arise out of the evidence produced against him.

That every person is presumed to be of sound mind until the contrary is proved, and the burden of rebutting this presumption rests on the prisoner, with the addition of the following:

If the jury believe, from the evidence, that the deceased previous to the day of his death had adulterous intercourse with the wife of the prisoner; and further, that the deceased on the day of his death, shortly before the prisoner left his house, made signals, inviting to a further act or acts of adultery, which said signals, or a portion of them, were seen by the prisoner; and that, influenced by such provocation, the prisoner took the life of the deceased, such provocation does not justify the act or reduce such killing from murder to manslaughter.

Mr. Brady said that counsel on both sides had conferred privately as to the course which this discussion would take. The prosecution would open and close, but if new matter was introduced in the closing speech, the privilege would be given to the defence to respond.

Mr. Brady then proceeded to read the instructions asked by the defence, (as published in Saturday morning's papers,) and handed them to the Judge.

Mr. Carlisle stated the grounds on what he thought the instructions, asked by the prosecution, should be granted and those asked by the defence, or some of them should be rejected. The first point made by the prosecution, that if the homicide were willful and intentional, and were induced by the belief of the prisoner, that the deceased had criminal intercourse with the prisoner's wife nevertheless it was murder; if the jury believe that no violence or assault was offered by the deceased at the moment of the homicide, that presented hypothetically on the whole evidence in the case of a willful and intentional killing, without provocation in law, it also presented the proposition, that a previous seduction of or adultery with the prisoner's wife, is no provocation in law, even if the jury believe it, but the instruction further proceeds to guard the jury against the conviction of the prisoner if he were insane at the time of the killing.

He did not know that he ought to consume the valuable time of the Court in discussing the first proposition—namely, that a previous adultery is not provocation in law. The case of adultery as leading to homicide, wherever it is referred to in the book, is referred to solely in cases where the husband catches the adulterer in flagrante delicto. All the authorities confine it further exclusively to the case of an instant killing. So that there are two points in it—one that the parties must be caught in flagrante delicto, and second, that the homicide must be instantaneous. But there was no authority for saying that adultery had ever been held as tending to establish a justification of the act of homicide. They had heard reasoning and eloquence on the subject; but as yet heard no authority cited on the other side. They were told that every man was to judge, when he finds himself aggrieved, whether the law of the land gives him adequate relief, and if he does not, then he is remitted to his natural rights. In other words, they were told that there were two conditions in every society—a state of nature, and a state of society an imperium in imperio. He would not argue that proposition; its mere statement was its own refutation. It was also argued that human law must be in consonance with Divine law. He would not go into any argument on that subject, but would concede, for the sake of argument, the proposition. He denied, however, that the Divine law anywhere authorized the taking of a human life for any wrong, by the person wronged. The Divine law did not make adultery as great a crime as murder. That sacred volume, on its sacred pages, had, from beginning to end, in letters of living light, denunciations of such acts of violence as this—and he further said, that at no period of the Jewish dispensation was it ever held that the punishment of adultery by death was other than a judicial punishment. He denied that any text in the Bible countenanced the idea that he who had been injured was authorized to take the life of the adulterer. Dr. Paley in discussing this sin of adultery, had referred to that most touching of all the incidents recorded in the New Testament—the occasion when the Scribes and Pharisees brought to the Savior the woman taken in adultery. They said to him, "Master this woman hath been taken in adultery, in the very act; the law of Moses says that crime shall be punished with death; what sayest thou?" The Evangelist adds that they said this "tempting him." How tempting him? Tempting him to take upon himself some judicial authority, that they might have an opportunity of accusing him. Finally he gave them that notable answer, "Let him that is without sin cast the first stone at her." "Then one by one the Scribes and Pharisees slunk away, and the Saviour turned and asked the woman, 'Hath any man condemned thee?' She said, 'No man, Lord.' Then said he, 'neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more.'" I, said he, pronounce no judgment; I take upon myself no judicial authority, "Go and sin no more." If his Honor would refer to the Greek, he would find that the verb was calachrino, equivalent to the Latin judico, to pass sentence against one. It showed that at that time there was no such thing among the Jews as private authority to punish adultery. What could be more shocking, what so irreconcilable with the existence of peace and good government than the doctrine that he who is grievously wronged is to take into his own hands the knife, and to execute summary judgment against the offender? Society could not exist with such a doctrine. If it were established here in the capital of the nation, the land would present one great scene of violence and confusion—because the principle would not be confined to the single crime of adultery, but would extend to all other wrongs for which the law did not give the offended party adequate reparation. He did not know that it was necessary for him to argue these instructions any further. In regard to the other instructions prepared by his colleague, he would not discuss the second, third and fourth, because they were copied from the instructions of his Honor in the case of Day. As to the fifth instruction the proposition was, although adultery did not offer a legal provocation or justification, yet, if the prisoner knew that the deceased had had adulterous intercourse with the prisoner's wife, and if the prisoner saw the signals and knew their meaning, the passion excited would make a legal provocation, reducing the grade of crime from murder to manslaughter. It merely asked his Honor to repeat in this case the old and well-settled law on that subject. As to the propositions offered by the defence, they were, many of them, if not all, liable to the objection of being abstract propositions of law and did not conform to the practice here. The counsel read them. The first proposition, he said, was an abstract proposition and was liable to the objection, that his Honor would have to confide to the jury the functions of the Judge. The effect of laying down this proposition to the jury, without anything more, your Honor, who is placed there for the purpose of instructing us at the bar and the jury, as to the law, and to whom the community look for a declaration of law, leaves it to the jury to find whether there is any proof of alleviation, excuse or justification arising out of the defence. Does the counsel mean to say, in general terms, with regard to the feelings with which men are disposed to look at the fact of killing under these circumstances, that they may find something of alleviation, excuse or justification of the act? It is not as to the alleviation which might be drawn under other and different circumstances, therefore, that they find in the circumstances of the case made by the prosecution. There is some alleviation, is it meant to say, if the jury find that the presumption of malice is rebutted? I presume not. Your Honor is to say to the jury what facts and circumstances it is competent for them, if they believe them, to consider as an alleviation, excuse or justification in this case, for it must be alleviation, excuse or justification in the eye of the law. It must be what your Honor must declare legal alleviation, excuse or justification; and it would be, I think, taking an extraordinary, not the usual course, to throw the whole case before the jury without giving instructions. What is meant by this equivocal language is, that the jury are presumed to be acquainted with the law further than what other men know of it. Without the aid of your Honor, it is not to be presumed what is the law which will amount or extend to alleviation, excuse or justification. I object to the first proposition on this ground. I will say nothing about the abstract proposition of law, but will add, from the fact of killing, whenever the law presumes malice, it may be rebutted by certain facts and circumstances, or circumstances and facts of a certain sort, which the law regards as alleviation, excuse or justification. As to the second proposition—namely, the existence of malice—it is not presumable in the case, if, on any rational theory consistent with all the evidence, the homicide was either justifiable, excusable, or an act of manslaughter. I must express my admiration at the singular adroitness with which it has been prepared. I think I see in this proposition an invitation to the jury to consider whether, on all they have heard in this case, the theory of my learned friend—although I don't mean to say it is his theory alone, but may be that of the gentlemen associated with him—whether the theory of the homicide was excusable under these circumstances, and whether it is a rational theory; and that, if the jury think it is, then the existence of malice is not presumable. While I acknowledge, to the fullest extent, the right of the jury to give a general verdict of guilty or innocent, as they may think the facts and the law require, I deny it is the province of this or any Court to invite the jury, or to submit to the jury on the application of counsel, the question whether the law be thus or so. We had better—I say it with the most perfect respect—abolish the Bench entirely if such practice is to prevail, and trust to the jury, without any interference of the Judge. I know of no authority or precedent, on the face of it, by express terms, which includes a submission to the jury by the Court as to what is the law of the case. They and not your Honor are to determine whether there be a rational theory of justification in law, in any view of the evidence of this case. Your Honor is to tell them what is a justification in law, and it is for them to form their opinion.

As to the third point—namely, that if there be any rational hypothesis, consistent with the conclusion that the homicide was justifiable or excusable, the defendant must be acquitted—this was substantially the same as the second, only that it was more baldly stated.

In the fourth proposition, the defence undertake to save the prisoner from conviction for manslaughter, by saying that, if the jury believe that Mr. Sickles intended to kill Mr. Key, he cannot be convicted of manslaughter. He submitted, however, that it did not follow that, because Mr. Sickles intended to kill Mr. Key, he could not, therefore, be convicted of manslaughter. He could suppose many cases where a party does intend to kill the assailant, and does kill him, and where the act falls short of murder, and is manslaughter.

The fifth proposition was, again asking your Honor voluntarily to surrender into the hands of the jury the functions of the Judge—the whole investigation on the whole question of law and fact. If His Honor did that, society would be exposed to those doctrines that are inconsistent with the existence of civil society. The jury would be referred to their own consciences, without regard to law, and would be asked to say whether that unhappy deceased did or did not deserve his fate; and if they thought he did deserve it, they would be asked to acquit the prisoner. He would not stop to argue the falsity of that proposition.

The sixth proposition was, that if Mr. Sickles killed Mr. Key while the latter was in criminal intercourse with the wife of the prisoner, Mr. Sickles cannot be convicted of either murder or manslaughter. That was again laying down the doctrine of divine right on the part of the injured husband to slay an adulterer.

The seventh point was, that if the jury found that Mr. Sickles was laboring under the influence of a diseased mind, and was really unconscious that he was committing a crime, he is not in law guilty of murder. This proposition was in quotation marks, but he did not know where it was taken from. He did not suppose it was taken from his Honor's ruling.

Mr. Brady—It is Mr. Bradley's language in the Day case.

Mr. Carlisle—I am glad it is not the Judge's language.

Mr. Brady—His Honor adopted those instructions.

Mr. Carlisle—Could well imagine how his poetical friend on the other side, who seemed to have the great dramatist at his finger's end, could make an argument on the words, "diseased mind." He could transpose the words, and say with Macbeth, "Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased, pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow, raze out the written troubles of the brain?" &c., &c. This doctrine would amount to making ungovernable passion an equivalent to insanity. Such a doctrine would render criminal law nugatory.

The eighth proposition was similar to the seventh. It is, that if the jury believe, from any predisposing cause, the prisoner's mind was impaired, and he became mentally incapable of governing himself, &c. Why, said he, every man who is under the influence of uncontrollable passion and thirst for revenge is mentally incapable of governing himself. But who would argue that he was not accountable for acts done under that influence? If Mr. Sickles had adopted the theory of his friend, and been advised that it was no crime to kill Mr. Key under these circumstances, this proposition asked his Honor to say that then it was no crime, and that the jury must acquit him.

The ninth proposition again places it in the province of the jury to declare whether the prisoner had capacity of mind to decide upon the criminality of the particular act, the homicide, and if they think he had not, the jury must acquit him. There was a code which might hold that the deceased had forfeited his life to the prisoner. That was the duelling code. It was not the code of assassination, but of honor, where it is so arranged that the parties shall be placed on terms of equality. With that code, however, they had nothing to do. It was unchristian, was denounced by law, and was fast fading from civilized society.

Mr. Graham—I have lately perused the history of duelling, and I will let you have it, if you choose.

Mr. Carlisle—No, sir. I have no desire to read it.

Mr. Graham—The adulterer has never been placed on the footing of an honorable man, but has been treated as a dishonorable man.

Mr. Carlisle proceeded to discuss the tenth proposition, which is, that the law does not require that the insanity which absolves from crime should exist for any definite period, but only at the moment when the act is committed. He did not believe in such a state of insanity. No theorist had ever laid it down, and the proposition was entitled to no favor from the Court.

The eleventh proposition was, that if the jury have any doubt as to the homicide or the sanity of the prisoner, he should be acquitted. He argued that the presumption was to be in favor of sanity, not of insanity. The proposition here was, that that presumption should disappear, and that the prisoner should have the benefit of any doubt about sanity. Insanity was the most easily counterfeited matter, and if this doctrine were established all cases of homicide under passion could easily be brought within the defence of insanity. The defence of insanity was a special defence, and must be proved affirmatively and beyond doubt. There was no reason why that defence should be placed on more favored grounds than any other defence. On the contrary, there was every reason why the defence of insanity should be proved beyond any reasonable doubt. The doctrine embraced in this proposition was a very dangerous doctrine. It had been laid down by all authorities, and decided by the twelve judges of England, in McNaughten's case, that the defence of insanity must be proven to the satisfaction of the jury.

Mr. Brady understood, that in the case of a man named Oval, tried before his Honor, this very question had been discussed and passed upon.

Mr. Carlisle was not familiar with that case, and would leave it to the District-Attorney to comment upon. He referred to the language of the English judges in McNaughten's case, and closed his argument.

SUMMING UP FOR THE DEFENCE.

Mr. Stanton said it became his duty to present some considerations in support of the points of law which had been submitted by the defence, and which points were in conformity with those which may be given to a jury. The event which had brought the jury and the prisoner at the bar into solemn relations, and made the Court and the counsel participators in this momentous trial, was the death of Mr. Key at the hand of Mr. Sickles, on Sunday, the 27th of February. The occasion for this event was an adulterous intrigue between Mr. Key and the wife of Mr. Sickles. The law rising on the case must depend on the relations each held to the other at the time the occurrence took place. Two theories had been presented—one by the prosecution, the other by the defence. These theories, as in all such cases, are opposite; and it will be for the Court, by a comparison of these theories with the known principles of law, to give to the jury the instruction. The act of taking human life is designated in law, by the general term of homicide, which may be either by malice or without malice. The act of Congress which governs in this District designated two grades of unlawful homicide—namely, murder and manslaughter. He defined these two crimes in the language of Blackstone. In some States the law designates other grades of unlawful homicide, but only two are designated by the act of Congress above referred to; but life may be taken under circumstances which the law will excuse or justify. This must depend on variety of circumstances, neither foreseen nor enumerated, and must be judged by wise tribunals, and by maxims which form the common law of the land, and are essential to peace and security. They are illustrated by examples and cases, whence the reason of the law can be derived, and by these the true rule of judgment is ascertained. After mentioning two classes of cases in which a man would be exempted from judicial punishment for killing—namely, self-protection as a natural right, and the defence of one's household from the thief or robber—he said there was a third class, arising from the social relation—the law holding family chastity and the sanctity of the marriage bed, the matron's honor and the virgin's purity, to be more valuable and estimable in law than the property or life of any man. The present case belonged to that class on which rested the foundation of the social system, and, as it involved the life of the prisoner, it could not be too carefully considered, and this principle never came before a judicial tribunal in a form more impressive than now. Here, in the capital of the nation, the social and political metropolis of thirty millions of people, a man of mature age, the head of a family, a member of the learned profession, a high officer of Government, intrusted with the administration of the law, and who for years at this bar has demanded judgment of fine, imprisonment and death against other men for offences against the law, has himself been slain in open day in a public place, because he took advantage of the hospitality of a sojourner in this city. Received into his family, he debauched his house, violated the bed of his host, and dishonored his family. On this ground, alone, the deed of killing was committed. The instructions presented by defendant bring to the view of the Court two consistent lines of defence—one, that the act of the prisoner at the bar is justified by the law of the land, under the circumstances of its commission; the other, that, whether justified or not, it is free from legal responsibility by reason of the state of the prisoner's mind. When the crime was committed against him by the deceased, in both points of view, the relations which the deceased and the prisoner at the bar bore to each other at the moment of the fatal act are to be observed—one, as a husband outraged in his house, his family and his marital rights; the other, an adulterer in flagrante delicto. While counsel for the prisoner insist that the act is justified by the law, the counsel for the prosecution assert that the act is destructive of the existence of society, and demand judgment of death against him as a fitting penalty. The very existence of civil society depends, not on human life, but on the family relations. "Who knows not," says JOHN MILTON, "that chastity and purity of living cannot be established or continued, except it be first established in private families, from whence the whole breed of men come forth?" "The family," says another distinguished moralist, "is the cradle of sensibility, where the first lessons are taught of that tenderness and humanity which cement mankind together: and were they extinguished, the whole fabric of society would be dissolved." In a general sense the family may embrace various degrees of affinity, more or less near; but in a strictly legal sense it embraces the relations of husband and wife, parent and child, brother and sister. The first and most sacred tie, however, is the nuptial bond. "Eternal discord and violence," says a great moralist, "would ensue if man's chief object of affection were secured to him by no legal tie." No man could enjoy any happiness or pursue any vocation if he could not enjoy his wife free from the assaults of the adulterer. The dignity and permanence of the marriage are destroyed by adultery. When the wife becomes the adulterer's prey, the family is destroyed, and all family relations are involved in the ruin of the wife. When a man accepts a woman's hand in wedlock, he receives it with a vow that she will love, honor, serve and obey him in sickness or in health, and will cleave only to him. This bond is sanctified by the law of God. "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder." By a marriage, the woman is sanctified to the husband, and this bond and relation must be preserved for the evil as well as for the good. It is the blessing of the marital institution that it weans men from their sins and draws them to the performance of their duties. This seal of the nuptial vow is no idle ceremony. Thenceforth the law commands the adulterer to beware of disturbing their peace. It commands that no man shall look on the woman to lust after her. The penalty for disobedience to that injunction did not originate in human statues; it was written in the heart of man in the Garden of Eden, where the first family was planted, and where the woman was made bone of man's bone, flesh of man's flesh. No wife yields herself to the adulterer's embrace till he has weaned her love from her husband; she revolts from her obedience, and serves the husband no longer. When her body has been once surrendered to the adulterer, she longs for the death of her husband, and his life is often sacrificed by the cup of the poisoner, or the dagger or pistol of the assassin. The next greatest tie is that of parent and child. If in God's providence a man has not only watched over the cradle of his child, but over the grave of his offspring, and has witnessed earth committed to earth, ashes to ashes, and dust to dust, he knows that the love of a parent for his child is stronger than death. The bitter lamentation—"Would to God I had died for thee"—has been wrung from many a parent's heart. But when the adulterer's shadow comes between the parent and child, it casts over both a gloom darker than the grave. What agony is equal to his who knows not whether the children gathered around his board are his own offspring or an adulterous brood, hatched in his bed? To the child it is still more disastrous. Nature designs that children shall have the care of both parents; the mother's care is the chief blessing to her child—a mother's honor its priceless inheritance. But when the adulterer enters a family, the child is deprived of the care of one parent, perhaps of both. When death, in God's providence, strikes a mother from the family, the deepest grief that preys upon a husband's heart is the loss of her nurture and example to his orphan child; and the sweetest conversation between parent and child is when they talk of the beloved mother who is gone. But how can a father name a lost mother to his child, and how can a daughter hear that mother's name without a blush? Death is merciful to the pitiless cruelty of him whose lust has stained the fair brow of innocent childhood by corrupting the heart of the mother, whose example must stain the daughter's life. The pride and glory of the family is its band of brothers and sisters. Sprung from the same love, with the same blood coursing in their veins, their hearts are bound together by a cord which death cannot sever; for, wide asunder as may be the graves of a household, varied as may be their life here on earth, when life's rough ocean is passed, sooner or later they will rejoice on the heavenly coast—a family in heaven. But when the adulterer puts a young wife asunder from her husband, her child is cut off from all kindred fellowship. The companionship and protection of a brother of the same blood can never be hers. No sister of the same blood can ever share her sorrow or her joy. Alone, thenceforth, she must journey through life, bowed down with a mother's shame. Nor does the evil stop here. It reaches up to the aged and venerable parents of the wretched husband and of the ruined wife, and it stretches around to the circle of relative and friends that cluster around every hearth. Such are the results of the adulterer's crime on the home—on the home, not as it is painted by the poet's fancy, but home as it is known and recognized by the law—as it exists in the household, and as it belongs to the family of every man. They show that the adulterer is the foe of every social relation, the destroyer of every domestic affection, the fatal enemy of the family, and the desolator of the home. The crime belongs to the class known in law as mala in se—evil in itself—fraught with ruin to individuals and destruction to society. Such being its nature, we can easily perceive why it is that in Holy Writ the crime of the adulterer is pronounced to be one which admits of no ransom and no recompense. We can perceive why it is that in every book of the Old and New Testament it is denounced. Why it is, that by every holy lawgiver, prophet and saint it is condemned. We can understand why it is that twice it is forbidden in the Ten Commandments, and why Jehovah himself, from the tabernacle in the midst of the congregation, declared that "the man who committeth adultery with another man's wife, even he who committeth adultery with his neighbor's wife, shall surely be put to death." By God's own ordinance he was to be stoned to death, so that every family in Israel, every man, woman and child might have a hand in the punishment of the common enemy of the family. By the Levitical law, the adulteress was subject to the same punishment. But the Redeemer of mankind, when on earth, is supposed to have mitigated the punishment of the adulteress by requiring him who was without sin to cast at her the first stone. No such condition, however, was imposed in favor of the adulterer. There was no mitigation of his crime, and we know the Saviour's judgment of the sin when he declared that "He who looketh at a woman to lust after her committeth adultery in his heart." From the silence of Scripture on the occasion recorded in the Gospel of John, it is to be inferred that, as the adulterer and the adulteress had been taken in the act, the adulterer on that day in Jerusalem had been put to death by the husband, as he might be by the Roman law, before the adulteress had been brought to the Saviour's feet. This case has been cited here, as it often is, in favor of the adulterer and against the husband. But the argument of Dr. Paley, alluded to by counsel on the other side, conclusively shows that that case cannot be cited in favor of the adulterer. On that day, in Jerusalem, the laws of Moses, as a civil and political institution, had passed away, and the Roman law had taken its place. Why was it that the men of Jerusalem brought not to the Saviour the adulterer who had been taken at the same time, if they wanted to know the Saviour's judgment of the sin of adultery. By the Roman law, while the adulterer suffered death, that punishment does not seem to have been inflicted on the adulteress. This woman, therefore, was brought to the Saviour's feet to hear what would be his judgment. If he had undertaken to say that the laws of Moses ought not to prevail then, an accusation might be brought against him in the synagogue; and if, on the other hand, he had said that the laws of Moses should be enforced, then ready accusation would have leaped to their lips that he was usurping judicial functions, and he would have been brought before the judgment seat of the Roman authorities. As Dr. PALEY observes, the case only serves to show that the Saviour meant to rebuke those who tempted him, but that he never designed to shield the adulterer from the just doom of the law. What, then, is the act of adultery? It cannot be limited to the fleeting moment of sexual contact; that would be a mockery; for then the adulterer would ever escape. But law and reason mock not human nature with any such vain absurdity. The act of adultery, like the act of murder, is supposed to include every proximate act in furtherance of, and as a means to, the consummation of a wife's pollution. This is an established principle in American and English law, established from the time of Lord Stowell, as will be hereafter shown. If the adulterer be found in the husband's bed, he is taken in the act; if on the husband's approach he leaps from the couch, and is found hid in a closet, he is as clearly in the act, within the meaning of the law, as if he was found in the wife's arms. If he provide a place for the express purpose of committing adultery with another man's wife, and he be found leading her, accompanying her, or following her to that place for that purpose, he is taken in the act. If he not only provides, but habitually keeps such a place, and he is accustomed by preconcerted signals to entice the wife from her husband's house, to besiege her in the streets, to accompany her to that vile den; and if, after giving such preconcerted signal, he be found watching her, spyglass in hand, and lying in wait around a husband's house, that the wife may join him for that guilty purpose, he is taken in the act. If a man hire a house, furnish it, provide a bed in it for such a purpose, and if he be accustomed, day by day, week by week, and month by month, to entice her from her husband's house, to tramp with her through the streets to that den of shame, it is an act of adultery, and is the most appalling one that is recorded in the annals of shame; if, moreover, he has grown so bold as to take the child of the injured husband, his little daughter, by the hand, to separate her from her mother, to take the child to the house of a mutual friend while he leads the mother to the guilty den, in order there to enjoy her, it presents a case surpassing all that has ever been written of cold, villainous, remorseless lust. If this be not the culminating point of adulterous depravity, how much further could it go? There is one point beyond; the wretched mother, the ruined wife, has not yet plunged into the horrible filth of common prostitution, to which she is rapidly hurrying, and which is already yawning before her. Shall not that mother be saved from that, and how shall it be done? When a man has obtained such a power over another man's wife that he cannot only entice her from her husband's house, but separate her from her child for the purpose of guilt, it shows that by some means he has acquired such an unholy mastery over that woman's body and soul that there is no chance of saving her while he lives, and the only hope of her salvation is that God's swift vengeance shall overtake him. The sacred glow of well-placed domestic affection, no man knows better than your Honor, grows brighter and brighter as years advance, and the faithful couple whose hands were joined in holy wedlock in the morning of youth find their hearts drawn closer to each other as they descend the hill of life to sleep together at its foot; but lawless love is short-lived as it is criminal, and the neighbor's wife so hotly pursued, by trampling down every human feeling and Divine law, is speedily supplanted by the object of some fresher lust, and then the wretched victim is sure to be soon cast off into common prostitution, and swept through a miserable life and a horrible death to the gates of hell, unless a husband's arm shall save her. Who, seeing this thing, would not exclaim to the unhappy husband, Hasten, hasten, hasten to save the mother of your child. Although she be lost as a wife, rescue her from the horrid adulterer; and may the Lord, who watches over the home and the family, guide the bullet and direct the stroke. (Here the audience broke into an unrestrainable burst of applause, which the officers of the court vainly endeavored to check.) And when she is delivered, who would not reckon the salvation of that young mother cheaply purchased by the adulterer's blood? Aye, by the blood of a score of adulterers? The death of Key was a cheap sacrifice to save one mother from the horrible fate which, on that Sabbath day, hung over this prisoner's wife and the mother of his child. Counsel then proceeded to discuss the law and the judicial decisions of England and of this country as bearing upon the question of adultery as a justification for homicide. In speaking of the laws of Maryland, as they descended to the District of Columbia at the time of the cession in 1801, he said it had never been adjudged by this or any other court that the man who destroyed the violator of his family chastity was guilty of a crime. He cited Manning's case. Manning was a married man, who, entering his house one day, found his wife in the arms of a neighbor, who was committing adultery with her; the husband snatched up a stool and struck a blow over the adulterer's head and killed him on the spot, and for this was arraigned as a prisoner for murder. As an Englishman it was his birthright to have the act passed upon by a jury of his country, and his guilt or innocence determined by them in accordance with the common law; but this was in the dark day of judicial tyranny and corruption—the day when jurors were fined and sent to jail, as he quoted authorities to show, for refusing to find verdicts against their consciences, in accordance with the charge of the Court—in a day when, from the King's Bench, from Westminster Hall, it was declared that the Judge was entrusted with the liberties of the people, and that his saying was the law; that was the day when it was adjudged that the husband was a felon for killing a man caught in adultery with his wife. In Manning's case, Judge Twisden directed a special verdict, and determined the degree of guilt himself, and Manning was punished by being branded on the hand as a felon. There were four epochs in which killing in such cases went unpunished—it was justified under the Jewish dispensation, by the laws of Solon, by those of the Roman Empire, and by the Gothic institutions which have given shape to our own. By the mere force of frequent repetition in the books of Manning's case, it has come to be believed that a man must stand by the bed of his wife and behold the adulterer polluting his bed, and not raise his hand against him. From the time of Edward II. to King Charles—three hundred and sixty odd years—no word is to be found in the common law, no word imputing guilt to the slayer of the violator of the chastity of his wife. This right to kill was never denied till now. There was one fact he had never before seen related, except by Paley, that by the laws of the Commonwealth, immediately preceding the time of Charles, adultery was punished by death.

Mr. Graham remarked that Blackstone mentioned it. In 1650, at a period before the judgment in Manning's case, it was punishable by death.

Mr. Stanton—The age of Charles was an age of adultery and gross corruption; the palace was filled with harlots and thronged with adulterers and adultresses; the judges were the panderers, partakers and protectors of the corruptions of the age, and the same Court which judged the husband to be a felon for slaying an adulterer on his bed, fined and sent jurors to prison for refusing to find verdicts in accordance with its instructions; it was the same Court which hunted Quakers, Catholics and Nonconformists to death; the same Court which persecuted John Howe and Richard Baxter, and which sent to the pillory and prison John Bunyan for preaching the Gospel to the poor. Counsel referred for the history of those times to the first volume of Macaulay, page 140. This was the state of the laws and social life at the time the principle was introduced into the common law of England that to kill an adulterer in the act is a crime; and when society in this District is reduced to the same conditions; and when the Government offices are filled by open and avowed adulterers; when the professions of law and medicine shall be thronged with libertines; when the wife's purity and family chastity shall become a jest, then it will be time to introduce here a principle of common law never before heard from the judgment-seat; then it will be necessary for the Court to extend the shield of law over its attorneys to save their lives from the hands of the husbands whose wives they have violated, whose homes they have destroyed, and whose families they have made desolate. I claim, then, on this proposition, that the expression or rule of the common law in regard to the consent of the wife had its origin in a state of manners and of social life that do not exist in this country, and that that rule is not applicable here. It is founded on the principle that the wife's consent can qualify the degree of the adulterer's guilt, and determine the husband to be a criminal. In American society there is a freedom from restraint and supervision that exists nowhere else, and this results from various causes. Husbands, fathers and brothers devote a large share of time to the cares of life, and to the duty of providing for the family, during which time the female portion of the family are left to themselves without protection. The frequent changes of habitation, and the equality of our social condition lead to a frankness of intercourse which requires, for the sanctity of the home and the security of the marriage bed, a rigorous personal responsibility, to the death. The peculiar conditions of society in this District are also to be noted before any principle like that of social law can be introduced. Families come hither from all parts of the Union to remain for a shorter or a longer period of time. To enjoy any social life here the intercourse must be frank, without suspicion. The time which, in long-established communities, may enable individuals to choose and pick out those with whom they may associate, is not had here; besides, it has been the custom here for officers of the government, and those in the public employment, to throw open their doors with a wide hospitality that exists nowhere else. This forms a peculiar feature and attraction in Washington society, and by the population that it attracts here and the stimulus thus given to business, the wealth and prosperity of the city and District are promoted. But if these social occasions are to be made the means of assignation; if they are to become the means by which the adulterer pursues his lust, then the doors of families must be swiftly closed. No man would be willing to have his hospitality made the means of an assignation, or the social occasions when he desires to give his friends and neighbors pleasure, converted into opportunities for corrupting the innocent wife of his friend. I repeat then that the doctrine on which this prosecution rests is founded on the Manning case, copied by Hale, and Foster, and Blackstone. But it is also to be observed that, from the day in which Manning's case was decided to the present hour it has not been followed by the conviction of a husband in England. No husband since then has been punished as a felon for taking the life of an adulterer. In three cases the doctrine of that case has been declared from the bench, but only by two Judges; the case of the Queen vs. Fisher, the case of the Queen vs. Kelly, and another case. Two of these were tried by Justice Parke, and the other by Baron Rolfe. In the one, there was no adultery of the wife; in the other, no marriage; and in the third, the crime was of a totally different nature. As, from the time of Alfred to the time of Charles II., there is no evidence that a husband was regarded as a felon in common law for slaying an adulterer; so from the time of Charles II. to the present hour, that principle has never been enforced by the punishment of any man in England. Counsel then proceeded to argue that in the three cases cited by the prosecution from the North Carolina and South Carolina reports there were entirely distinct questions at issue; that so far as the marital relations of slaves were concerned, they were not recognized by the laws of those States, and that, therefore, the adjudications or rulings in the cases of slaves did not govern or apply to this case. There was another case cited in Jones—the case of a white man. But there there was sufficient evidence to show that the killing proceeded from preceding malice. There was a case, however, cited from Hill's reports, which had some analogy to this case. There the adulterer slew a husband who was endeavoring to rescue his wife, and there it was held that the murderer could not set up the plea of self-defence. The American common law on the subject was shown in the cases of Singleton Mercer, of Myers, of Jacob Green, and the case of John Stump, and the case of Jarboe, where, in each instance the slayer of the seducer was acquitted. Counsel also referred to Smith's case and Sherman's case in Philadelphia, Boyer's case in Virginia, and Ryan's case, reported in vol. 2, Wheeler's Criminal Cases, page 54. Where, then, he asked, did the adulterous doctrine of Charles the Second prevail in America? Not where the stars and stripes wave—not even where the royal banner of England floats, for it was not long since, in Canada, a husband had followed his wife's seducer from city to city till he found and slew him; and there the doctrine of Charles the Second was repelled and the man instantly acquitted. By the American law, he proceeded, the husband is always present by his wife; his arm is always by her side; his wing is ever over her. The consent of the wife cannot in any degree affect the question of the adulterer's guilt, and if he be slain in the act by the husband, then it is justifiable homicide. I will pass then to the question of what constitutes the act. I understood one of the learned counsel for the prosecution to claim, in accordance with the very loose language of Baron Parke, that it is necessary for the husband to have ocular demonstration.

Mr. Carlisle—"Finding" is the word.

Mr. Stanton—It does credit to the frankness as well as to the good sense of the counsel not to claim that doctrine, but that is the doctrine of Manning's case. The wife could not only consent to the act, but the husband, if he came in, in the dark, could not lay his hand on the adulterer until he lit the candle and saw his shame; and then if he slew the adulterer he must have the felon's branding on his hand. The object was to erect before the husband the gallows and branding iron, so that the courtiers and corrupt men of that age might pursue with impunity the wives and daughters of the people; hence they demanded not only that the wife should not consent but that the husband should see his shame. As late as within the last few years, Baron Parke, sitting in the judgment seat of England, said that the husband must have ocular inspection of the act. What is the act, and what is necessary? It is the fact of adultery that constitutes the guilt of the individual and the justification of the husband. That fact is to be manifested according to the rules of evidence that aply in regard to other facts. It is claimed by the defence that the evidence was brought directly to the visual senses of the prisoner at the bar, but whether it was so or not, the fact is only to be determined by the ordinary rules of evidence. Counsel referred to the rules of evidence in regard to adultery, as laid down in Poynter, on Marriages, p. 187; Collins vs. the State, vol. 14 Alabama Reports, p. 686; the State vs. Jolly, vol. 3 Devereux and Battella p. 160. My last proposition is, the counsel proceeded, that the wife's consent cannot shield the adulterer, she being incapable by law of consenting to any infraction of her husband's marital rights, and that, in the absence of consent and connivance on his part, every violation of the wife's chastity is, in the contemplation of law, forcible and against his will, and may be treated by him as an act of violence and force on his wife's person. It follows, as a logical consequence, from the relation of husband and wife, as stated in the first proposition, because her very being and existence is suspended, that is to say, "incorporated and consolidated," says Blackstone, into that of the husband during marriage, that any invasion of the husband's right or chastity of the wife is a forcible act. The law does not look to the degree of force, it looks only to the forcible movement, and being an act of force it follows that the right of the husband to resist that force is clear and undoubted on the highest principle of law. My friend here (Mr. Carlisle) says condemns the adulterer as much as any one, but that he abhors lawless violence. So do I; but the question is here whether the violence be lawless? In undertaking to designate the act of the prisoner here as an act of violence, as an act of personal justice, he assumes the very question that is involved, because on no theory of law, on no system of jurisprudence recognized among men, has the defence of a right, the maintenance of possession in a right, the protection of a right, been recognized either as a revengeful act or an act of lawless violence. By the contemplation of law the wife is always in the husband's presence, always under his wing; and any movement against her person is a movement against his right and may be resisted as such. We place the ground of defence here on the same ground and limited by the same means as the right of personal defence. If a man be assailed, his power to slay the assailant is not limited to the moment when the mortal blow is about to be given; he is not bound to wait till his life is on the very point of being taken; but any movement towards the foul purpose plainly indicated justifies him in the right of self-defence, and in slaying the assailant on the spot. The theory of our case is, that there was a man living in a constant state of adultery with the prisoner's wife, a man who was daily, by a moral—no, by an immoral power—enormous, monstrous, and altogether unparalleled in the history of American society, or in the history of the family of man, a power over the being of this woman—calling her from her husband's house, drawing her from the side of her child, and dragging her, day by day, through the streets in order that he might gratify his lust. The husband beholds him in the very act of withdrawing his wife from his roof, from his presence, from his arm, from his wing, from his nest, meets him in that act and slays him, and we say that the right to slay him stands on the firmest principles of self defence. I have endeavored as briefly as I could to explain the principles of social law and jurisprudence on which the defence is planted, and I trust that on examination it will not be found to be any visionary ground of defence, or any such mere theory as was apprehended by my learned friend, (Mr. CARLISLE,) who opened the argument. He says that society could not exist on such principles, because this was the exercise of the right of private judgment; and if it were to be established as a principle, the land would be a scene of blood, as the punishment of adultery would be followed by the punishment of other crimes. Now if it were so, if this land were to be a scene of blood, and if it were necessary to make it so, I ask whether blood had not better run in torrents through our streets than that the homes of men should be destroyed by the adulterer at will? But it is not so. Neither your Honor nor I will be frightened by any such appalling picture. Thank God, adultery is a crime that is usually a stranger to American society. It is but rarely in our history that some great event like this occurs to startle society and lead it to the examination of the principles on which it is founded. That has been the case, and it should lead to the examination of the principles of law on which home and family rest—should result in planting around that home and family the safeguards of the law, in breaking through the bonds by which the adulterous court of Charles II. undertook to bind the arm of the husband—then some good will grow out of that great evil that has been produced by this event. It is not my purpose to pursue this discussion in reference to the other points. I shall leave them to my colleague, (Mr. Brady.) I thank your Honor for the patience with which you have heard me in the discussion of this question. I have endeavored to discuss it on principles which I believe, as a man, as a father and as a husband, to be essential to the peace and security of your home and mine. I have endeavored to discuss it on principles which are essential to the peace and prosperity of the society in which my home is planted, as well as yours; and I hope that, by the blessing of God, as it has been your Honor's good fortune to lay down the law which secures the family, in one aspect, from the seducer of the sister; you may also plant on the best and surest foundations the principles of law which secure the peace of the home, the security of the family, and the relations of husband and wife, which have been in the most horrid manner violated in this case.

As the counsel resumed his seat he was saluted with another outburst of applause.

The Court then adjourned.

Senator Douglas occupied a seat at the lawyers' table, and appeared much interested in Mr. Stanton's eloquent argument.

Mr. Brady will continue the argument on Monday, and Mr. Ould will close for the prosecution.

As incorrect statements continue to be made with regard to the publication of Mrs. Sickles' confession, it is deemed proper to give a full and explicit statement of the circumstance. When the confession was offered in evidence by Mr. Brady, and while the argument on its admission was proceeding, the reporter asked Mr. Meagher, into whose hands the document passed on its return from the bench, to let him have it to be copied. Mr. Meagher refused to do so on his own responsibility, but referred the matter to the senior counsel, who said "Certainly." Mr. Meagher then, as well to prevent the original from being mislaid as to accommodate the reporter, was kind enough to copy it at the request of the latter, and the copy was immediately sent to the telegraph office. These are the simple facts, and it is only owing to the indiscreet desire of some of Mr. Sickles' friends to save him from any blame that might be connected with the publication, and to throw that blame where it did not belong, that this further explanation becomes necessary. The fact was, that while Mr. Sickles desired the suppression of the document, and extremely regretted its publication, his counsel did not share in that feeling—considering its publication necessary for the full vindication of their client.

The Sickles Case and the Law of Insanity.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your correspondent "Lex," in Saturday's paper, in alluding to the suggestion of Mr. SICKLES to his counsel, "that the burden of proving him (the prisoner) in a discretionary mind was on the prosecution," cites the head note of People vs. McCann, 16 New-York Rep., p. 58, to prove Mr. SICKLES' knowledge of New-York law.

That head note, unfortunately, is not indicative of the judgment of the Court. If Mr. SICKLES, or his counsel, or your correspondent, had gone further and read the decision of the Judges, instead of depending upon the loose dictum of the reporter, they would have seen that the Court held as Judge CRAWFORD did, that "Sanity is the normal state, and that there is no presumption of insanity" upon a trial for murder.

On page 62 Judge BOWEN says: "It is also a rule, well established by authority, that where, in a criminal case, insanity is set up as a defence, the burden of proving the defence is with the defendant, as the law presumes every man to be sane."

On page 65 Judge BROWN says: "It certainly is true that sanity is the normal condition of the human mind, and in dealing with acts, criminal or otherwise, there can be no presumption of insanity."

With these dicta "all the judges concurred." No wonder that, as your correspondent remarks, "Judge CRAWFORD seemed to be amused at the suggestion of Mr. SICKLES." Yours, LEX SCRIPTA.

MUSICAL.

THE DRIGGS' PATENT PIANO-FORTE,
OR THE VIOLIN PIANO.
It is built upon an iron frame, or bed plate, entirely separate from the case, thus relieving the sound-boards and every other part of the instrument from the strain.
It will remain in tune for many months, and when the strings are settled even for years.
It has convex sounding-boards above and below, like the Violin, which are connected together in the same manner, thus making the entire instrument a vibratory shell.
It has greater depth and fulness of tone, and its sostenuto, or power of sustaining the tone, has never been equaled, except by instruments of the violin class.
It improves with age and use, becoming more vibratory, and the tone purer and more sonorous.
It is the best piano-forte existing, and is recommended by Gottschalk, Thalberg, and many other celebrated artists and professors. Sole agents,

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The testimony in the Sickles case was closed on both sides on Saturday—Ex-Senator Brodhead being the last witness examined. Nothing material was elicited. The points on which instructions to the Jury are asked for were then submitted, and Mr. Carlisle proceeded to argue the case for the prosecution. He was followed by Mr. Stanton, for the defence, at the close of whose argument the Court adjourned. Mr. Brady is to speak to-day, and Mr. Ould will close for the prosecution. It is possible that the Judge may defer his instructions to the Jury until to-morrow. It is still uncertain whether there will be any summing up in the case.

Gov. Hincks, of Barbadoes, who is on a visit to Canada, had a public reception in Toronto last week. A congratulatory address was presented by the St. Patrick's Society of that city, to which the Governor replied briefly. The citizens then paid their respects to him.

The booksellers and publishers of Boston have resolved to institute annual Book-Trade Sales in that city. The first one is to take place during the early part of August next.

Antioch College, in Ohio, was sold at public auction in Cincinnati last week, for $40,000. The purchaser was an agent of Mr. Francis A. Palmer of this city. After the sale, however, the College was transferred to its former owners, free from debt, and will be immediately re-organized.

There is a new feature in the Oberlin Rescue trials at Cleveland. The two Kentucky witnesses, Jennings and Mitchel, called by the prosecution, have been arrested by the Sheriff of Lorain County, on a charge of kidnapping John, the fugitive for whose escape the Rescuers are being tried.

Letters received in Boston from Senator Sumner state that his health is again very feeble. He goes immediately to Italy.

The new Broadway Tabernacle at the intersection of Broadway, the Sixth-avenue and Thirty-fourth-street, was opened yesterday and dedicated. Very large congregations assembled there in the morning, afternoon and evening. The Rev. Drs. Edward A. Park, of Andover Theological Seminary, and R. S. Storrs, of Brooklyn, and the pastor of the Church, Dr. Thompson, delivered discourses appropriate to the occasion.

The Report of the City Inspector for the last week, shows the mortality of the City was but 405, being an increase of four on the report of the week previous.

The April Term of the Court of General Sessions closed on Saturday, when Recorder Barnard passed various sentences on the prisoners who had been convicted during the month. Although the Court of Oyer and Terminer has relieved the Recorder's Court of the more important trials, such as those of Quimbo Appo, Michael Flynn, and Jean Bosquet, he has still been obliged to sit till a late hour daily to finish the business which was duly presented by the District-Attorney. The Grand Jury, it is understood, have found more indictments for the next Term than have been presented before in the past three years—a fact which does not indicate a decrease of crime in our City.

On Saturday, 2,000 bales of Cotton were sold at about previous prices. Breadstuffs were lightly dealt in, as were also Sugars and Molasses,—owing, in part, to the unfavorable weather. Provisions were more active. Pork was unsettled. Beef was on the advance. The sales of Naval Stores included 1,400 bbls. Common Resin at $1 72½ ⅌ 310 lbs, and 470 bbls. Spirits Turpentine at 53c. @ 53½c ⅌ gallon. The movements in other branches of trade were restricted. The total number of vessels of all classes in port was 492.

"O, no, we Never Mention Him!"—In the Address which the Democratic members of the Legislature issued, according to usage, at the close of the session, no mention whatever is made of Mr. Buchanan, though the signers must have known that he was elected President of the United States by their party in 1856. The omission is at once suggestive and awkward. To assume that the President had no friends among the Democratic members would seem to be unwarranted; but it is necessary to believe that commendation of him would give rise to dissensions, and was, therefore, suppressed.

In this state of the case, the Albany Atlas and Argus does for the Democratic representatives what they declined to do for themselves. It asserts that every one of them avowed his continued fidelity to the principles and platform of their party; and that, "whatever may be the condition of other States, the Democracy of New-York are not divided in regard to National politics or to President Buchanan, the elected Chief of the Party."

Interpreting this equivocal declaration in the light of the Legislative address, it must mean that the Democracy are unanimous in their belief that the less said about "the elected Chief" the better—in short, that they regret having elected him.

Feeling, however, that some reason should be given for the silence of the document on national topics, the Atlas and Argus says it was "because the Republicans had, in the most cowardly manner, abandoned all their avowed principles of national policy." That is to say, the Republicans having proved themselves cowards, the Democrats felt impelled to imitate their example. The explanation only makes the matter worse. The fact cannot be concealed that the Democracy of the State refuse to touch Mr. Buchanan. It is of course polite in the Atlas and Argus to soothe the President's feelings. But still, no one can overlook the remarkable silence of the Democratic legislators to say a civil word for their President, when the occasion not only permitted but demanded it. The Atlas and Argus will find it quite useless to argue that the slight was not studied and deliberate.

New York does not stand alone. In almost every State the President has either lost or split his party. He has satisfied neither the North nor the South. The former he has alienated by his unquestionable efforts to extend the area of the Slave power, and the latter by the damaging way in which he did it. His party feel that silence is the greatest grace they can accord him.

Sanitary State of the City.

New-Yorkers like to show their British breeding by growling at what once annoyed them long after they have got used to the annoyance, and have come rather to enjoy it. Dirt, for instance, and dirty streets, once were an eye-sore and a blemish, but for years back they have been essential elements in our City civilization—the central source of profit to whole classes. They have bred new trades, originated new trains of thought, and glorified some folks. Words are nothing; actions speak so much louder, that, substantially, they are nothing whatever. And our municipal action testifies that dirty streets are the glory of the Metropolis. Ever since the great Ebling's reign, the tax-payers have been paying $300,000 a year to keep the cobble-stones concealed, and the filth generated of human habitations in the open ways wherever it is most convenient of observation. In violation of the spirit of the age, the contracts for cleaning three Wards—the Tenth, Thirteenth and Sixteenth—have run on, the contractors parading at rare intervals a scattered force of spavined horses and unused carts through portions of their domain, and drawing princely remuneration for their trouble. An association of private gentlemen, who have an old-fashioned fondness for ancient customs, have kept Broadway in cleanly condition—a sort of base-line, if cleanliness ever should be the fashion again, to prove the original grade by, and conform the depth of excavation to. But beyond this, street-cleaning has been a forgotten art—dirt-carts an appliance of former times, the story of whose daily perambulations is fast fading into fable. City Inspector Morton, outliving the party that spawned him, survives now his own usefulness. The City he was once elected to inspect has gone under. Piles of brick and mortar, stately warehouses, princely residences, still stand, and the tramp of carts, omnibuses and men over the accumulations of ashes, garbage and mud, still mark distinctly the lines where the streets once ran. But City inspection is an exhausted function—nothing but Morton, rescued from oblivion by plucky and well-paid Aldermen, and a score or so of night-scavengers meeting daily to scrawl their bills against the City, remain of what was a controlling Department.

Satisfied as we are with this result, and accepting with complaisance this dirty issue, still something ought to be done. To maintain a parallelism of the tops of the compost heaps to the ancient street levels, the Common Council ought to have men weekly rake off their surface, and now is the proper time to seed them down. Equal parts of timothy seed and clover, abundantly scattered, would bring a vernal beauty to our avenues, and furnish some encouragement to the herds of goats and swine that are coming down from the upper suburbs to reanimate and make rural the lower Wards. Melons and cucumbers would grow luxuriantly in the Sixth Precinct; and if there is a lack of substantial soil, a return to the old Dutch custom of performing ablutions in front of their domicils, would enable the industrious to start a cabbage-patch on the side-walks before every man's own door.

But nothing is perpetual. We off with new loves daily and on with new ones. We don new fashions this year and doff them next as absurd and ridiculous. We ran a narrow risk of an entire change of policy only last week. If the Honorable Mr. Spencer, of the Assembly, had held his faith in that Sanitary Bill which he consented to report, probably it would have become a law. A new Health Board, composed in part of representatives from the Medical Schools and the Board of Architects, would have assumed the control of the sanitary ordering of the City, and cleanliness might have come into fashion again. Four votes being found wanting to make the bill a law, however, we are spared the change, and keep on a year longer, at least, in the old way.

Dirt, which made a great man of Arcularius out of the smallest pattern, and swelled the littleness of Ebling into colossal proportions, has immortalized Morton, and for fame he could afford to die to-day. Let us, however, rejoice that we live in such a day—that our life-time is an era. When our raven hair is bleached, we shall glory that in our youth we trod the historic hills of filth. When, in our vastly bettered fortunes, we stroll though Constantinople—travelers, looking up eye-opening curiosities—we shall turn with contempt from its famously dirty streets; in our prime we walked far dirtier ones at home. When we ride into Cologne, expecting to be stifled with its several stenches, our fellow-passengers will look on us with envy as we claim that they don't begin to come up to any of those with which Morton, for $300,000 a year, delighted the Metropolis of the Western world.

The Herald Still Harping on Washington Heights.—Since Prometheus was chained so cruelly upon the frosty Caucasus, no mortal has been so ill-treated, upon any elevated region, as is the Editor of the Herald upon Washington Heights. It is his desolate doom to be forever slipping away from that bleak exposure, and to be forever arrested upon the slope. He cannot escape from Washington Heights. He cannot be silent upon Washington Heights. Fastened there forever by a mysterious fate, he must forever sing the praises of the place of his torture. He is a kind of male Andromeda, with no Perseus on the wing to release him.

Some time ago it was rumored that a lunatic of uncertain origin had been seduced into buying this detestable hill, and that the Editor of the Herald would thenceforth be at peace. The story gathered plausibility from the fact that for two successive Sundays the name of Washington Heights had not been alluded to in the columns of the Herald. But that pleasing hope was soon dispelled by the revival of the usual Sunday services in honor of Washington Heights, and never at any period of his protracted punishment have the exclamations of the pinioned victim been so vehement and heartrending as of late. In yesterday's Herald, for instance, the subject of Washington Heights is dealt with in tones of absolute desperation. The leading column of the journal was devoted appparently to a parallel between the decay of London and the decay of New-York. The innocent reader was entrapped into a series of speculations upon the speed at which London has outgrown its old clothes, by a dexterous allusion to a recent article, in which the London Times urges the necessity of "rebuilding" the great metropolis. From these reflections the transition was easy to a comparative estimate of the advance of New-York—proving, or affecting to prove, that if London requires an outlay of one hundred millions of dollars to make it habitable, New-York requires at "least fourfold" that amount of expenditure to adapt it to the demands of its inhabitants. Before the astounded reader could draw breath from the shock of this "fearful looking for of" taxes, down came the real gist of the whole demonstration, in the intimation that "the elevated plateau known as Washington Heights, from Manhattanville to Spuyten-Devil Creek, which is the boundary of the City and of the Twelfth Ward, will soon be crowded with beautiful villas, and become the faubourg of the wealth and fashion of the metropolis of the Union."

"Elevated plateau" is good; so also is "faubourg of the wealth and fashion;" and on the whole we do not think the demon that chained the Herald upon these Heights ought to exact anything more of his prey. Neither Holloway, of the historical pills, nor the "Retired Physician, whose sands of life have nearly run out," has ever surpassed this extreme type of the puff circumlocutory.

A Party Portrait of Dictator Lopez.

Should the Dictator of Paraguay have the curiosity to turn over files of the official organs of the American Government, in order to ascertain in what temper the news of the Treaty of Asuncion has been received, he will possibly be surprised at the rudeness of the Northern barbarians. The contrast with the tone of his own official Seminario, and with the amiable grandiloquence of that modern Chrysostom, Chevalier Bowlin, is at once striking and painful. The Asuncion oracle is at a loss for superlatives to express its estimate of North American magnanimity. The Washington oracles congratulate us upon a convention wrung from the fears of an obstinate and paltry tyrant in the forests of the Upper Plata. Seeing the new and perfect harmony established between the Governments, might it not be well to adjust the diapasons of the national organs to stricter accord?

There is, of course, a reason for this dissonance, which is understood here, but which it will be difficult to render comprehensible to our new friend at the South. Complimentary and even tender things breathed by Bowlin when parting with the Paraguayan, amid throngs of admiring and white-footed women, will not bear repetition under our bleaker skies. The swans of Cydnus sing not in hyperborean waters. And, if possible, such a song would be far from politic. To reproduce the features of our recent enemy agreeably to the outline supplied by the captivated Envoy, would destroy all the merit which the Administration of Mr. Buchanan assumes for having devised and executed its latest Argonautic achievement. Grant Lopez to be the devout cultivator of peace which Bowlin represents him; grant his unvarying eagerness to adjust his difficulties with our Government; grant his readiness, compulsion aside, to meet all the requirements we could at any time reasonably make; and the unenlightened vulgar will naturally ask why these five millions of money flung away upon a rickety and ludicrous armada? Why did you not send Bowlin alone to execute a willing treaty? Why insist upon bringing back your olive-branch in the muzzle of your muskets? And such inquiries would be awkward. In vain, therefore, have the better qualities of the Dictator been brought to light. In vain are we instructed in all those pleasing traits of his nature that make him a Numa rather than a Nero. The needs of party require him to be the bigoted and impracticable brute, which it has been the interest of private authorities to depict him, and as such he is to be delivered to the pitiless hands of history. The Treaty came from a frightened bully; not from that "high-minded," that "illustrious," that "enlightened," that "courteous" gentlemen, "his excellency," the President of Paraguay. With an eye to that portion of posterity that will attend the poles in 1860, it is important to have the distinction fully understood.

Our City Railroads.

Now that we are delivered for a time from the fear of having any more City Railroads chartered, it may be well to give a little attention to the defects and inconveniences of those which already have possession of the public streets. We do not now refer to the outrage practised by all of them in overcrowding their cars and cheating passengers of the accommodations for which they have paid,—but to the obstacles which the rails offer to the free passage of vehicles through the streets.

As now built, the rail with its deep trough and narrow surface obstructs and strains all wheels that cross it, and affords no track to any wheels that should run upon it, except to the few which have narrow tires set exactly to its guage, and even these find a bearing only on their corners, in the trough of the rail. The wheels of carts and stages, in their turn, moving in the direction of the track, and hence striking the sides of the rail at an acute angle which will not enable them to mount it, rapidly crush and hammer down that part of the pavement in immediate contact with the rail, which is of all others the weakest, because the stones terminate in an unbroken line against the rail or sleeper, and do not lap or break joints. Thus the section of pavement most in use is habitually in the worst condition, and offers the greatest rolling resistance. This is not all; the lurching of the wheels of heavy vehicles on the bar pavement, racks and dislocates the rails and sleepers.

Again: if the wheels of one side of a vehicle run in the trough of the rail, the wheels of the other side are confined to a fixed and narrow track on the pavement, outside of the opposite rail. This portion of the pavement, from its excessive use, soon settles irregularly, forming another opposing trench to wheels crossing the track, and offering the greatest resistance to those following it. And, lastly, the high tread or bearing surface of the rail, together with its comparatively narrow base, renders it especially liable to be pounded out of line and out of bearing by the blows of heavy wheels which cross it. The narrow and irregular surface of the rail also strains the feet of horses, and affords them no flat and sure foothold when they strike it.

It would appear that our standard pattern of rail is most economical for the running of cars, and most disadvantageous for the working of all other vehicles. And if it was especially designed to keep off all other vehicles than the company's cars, it happily fails, for it would be far cheaper to let all the wheels in the street run flat and square upon it, than to allow them to take it at a disadvantage and hammer it to pieces.

Since all the vehicles in the street, then, are bound to use the rail-track, or misuse it, the wisest thing the companies can do is to afford the best accommodation to the miscellaneous traffic, for in so doing they allow the track to be merely used, not abused. And if such a course is politic for the old companies, it is vital for those which are yet without charters, and which are popularly opposed on the very ground that their railroads will incommode ordinary locomotion.

Nothing can be easier than to devise and apply a remedy. Make a wide, flat rail, raising a tread for car-wheels, not more than three-quarters of an inch high, which will give ample room for all the flange that horse car-wheels require. Heavy trains, propelled at high speed by steam, of course need a larger allowance for flange—an inch and five-eighths at least. The flat portion of the rail, which should be five or six inches wide, makes an excellent railway for every variety of vehicles, of various guages and widths of tire. Their rolling resistance is decreased to the minimum, and for this very reason they can all keep out of the way of the cars, since they can attain a speed, with the same power, four or five times higher than is possible on the common pavement. All travel would be facilitated, the up train taking the right-hand track, and the down train taking the opposite track, all on a fast trot. Vehicles wishing to turn off or turn on would not be obstructed by a series of ridges and hollows. The repairs of the pavement would be diminished, and the repairs of all kinds of vehicles and motors would be especially lessened. And the same weight of iron used in some of our absurd rails would be amply sufficient for a flat rail eight inches wide, which would answer the chief requirements, viz.: broad bearing surface, and ample lateral stiffness.

As to vertical stiffness, all that is required may be put into the webs or flanges at the sides of the rail, or it may be put into a deep wood or iron sleeper under the rail. The same proportion of stiffness required on steam railways is not required on horse railways, because the deflection of rails is largely increased by high speed. But if great vertical stiffness is required, a deep web may be rolled under the centre of the tread. Any disposition of metal would be better than that shown in many of our City rails, which are shaped in accordance with no law whatever, but are merely chunked.

The main improvements indicated are already commenced in Philadelphia. A flat rail, five inches wide, with a rising three-quarters of an inch, affords a universal railway. An eight-inch rail will doubtless soon follow. The railways are generally laid in two streets, the up track in one, and the down track in the next parallel street. And all vehicles, to a great extent, follow the direction of the cars, on the same ample track, without interfering with the cars or with each other. The general capacity of the street for all sorts of locomotion is thus increased.

Should some of our disappointed City Railroad Companies propose thus to accommodate the whole traffic, and at the same time protect their tracks from misuse, the public sentiment as to these institutions would rapidly and practically change.

Prospects of Quarantine.

Staten Islanders, by burning down the hospitals at Seguine's Point, and afterwards at Castleton, earned the merited reproach of the State, and seemed to put far off the happy day when the Quarantine nuisance would be removed from their borders. If they had been modest and unassuming after their incendiary exploits, probably the State Legislature would have passed some act by which the incendiaries should be made to reimburse the State for its burned property, and the Quarantine hospitals be reimposed upon their premises, with a fair prospect of an ultimate removal only when they should learn better manners.

But the incendiaries knew better than to trust to modesty, in their emergency, and the result shows that brass has not lost its virtue in these later days. They went up to Albany with the air of martyrs, and with a holy boldness demanded the instant removal of every trace of the pesthouse from their borders; they wanted $250,000 with which to effect their object, and even dictated a method for the sale of the State property, which could not fail to make a handsome speculation for such Staten Islanders as were within the ring. The Legislature, after a good deal of show of indignation at their arson, refused the boon asked, and granted $50,000 only. But this sum was ample for all the honest uses to which the Commissioners could put any amount of funds. Gov. Seymour has been several times to Washington, with the double object of persuading the United States Government to erect warehouses on Sandy Hook, where infected cargoes could be broken up, and of obtaining a cast-off war-steamer to anchor in the Lower Bay as a yellow-fever hospital. Meanwhile, Lieut.-Gov. Patterson has been scouring the City water-front, to find old hulks on which, in case of an arrival from a sickly port, those who have been exposed to infection may be detained until the danger of spreading it is passed. By these temporary arrangements, it is confidently hoped that before Fall, all that is really objectionable in a Quarantine establishment may be removed from Staten Island. The burial-ground back of Castleton will still be used, and until provision for small-pox patients on Ward's Island can be effected, it will not be deemed safe to give up entirely the occupancy of the Castleton fire-proof erections.

Governor Morgan and the three sagacious Commissioners do not for a moment think of perpetrating the folly of building an island, nor do they look longingly at Coney Island. They are all full in the faith that the New-Jersey Legislature, at its next session, will cede Sandy Hook, and any accommodations constructed or prepared elsewhere than on that sand-bar, they will deem merely as temporary affairs. The Sepoys managed their matters well. They averted punishment and got the little they wanted beside, by asking boldly for five times what they needed and pleading justification of all they had done. The Quarantine troubles, we may hope with some degree of confidence, are nearly over.

Railway War.—The battle of bulletins now waging between the Central Railroads of New-York and of Pennsylvania, is indicative of another and more effective conflict in which these mighty Corporations are engaged. Their positions respectively tend to make them rivals for the trade and travel between the seaboard and the West,—a fact which naturally, perhaps, but not necessarily, begets enmity. Each charges the other with a great many offences, and each strives to do the other all the harm it can—at the risk of suffering equal damage itself.

All disinterested parties readily perceive that such fights are suicidal. Why, then, are they set on foot? For two reasons The Directors are blinded by passion; and they carry on the war at the cost of others.

Whichever side wins the stockholders are beaten. Their interests cannot fail to be sacrificed. Does any one believe that if the two Boards owned the entire stock the public would be treated to the spectacle now exhibited? Would these gentlemen run their cars at a loss, if such loss fell upon their own pockets? They are by no means the sort of men to do business after such fashion. The chances are that not a fortnight would elapse before they would get together and come to an amicable arrangement by which both parties could make money. When one goes to war it makes all the difference in the world whether he pays the cost himself, or compels others to bear that burden. Such is human nature.

The Opera—A New Candidate for Favor.—Now that the most righteous of opera-goers feels himself at liberty to peruse the amusement columns of the daily papers with a view to casual gratification, it will be pleasant to find, as he can to-day, that the Academy of Music throws open its ample doors to welcome the penitent. Mr. Ullman, with his usual tact, has provided a delicacy well calculated to stimulate the palled appetite for opera. A brand-new prima donna—Mlle. Alajmo—makes her début. A large coffee-colored population hailing from Cuba, and conspicuous for dress-coats and cigarettes, already proclaims her excellence, and the lady is not destitute of admirers of a lighter tint. She has unquestionably enjoyed a career in Europe; indeed, the archives of the Academy reveal the fact that for a reasonable and delicate number of years she has been the prime favorite of the Italian world-musical—which, although a nonentity in the German mind, and perhaps utterly unworthy of cosmopolite consideration, still manages to supply us with the best of operas and the best of singers.

By delving in this repository of musical knowledge, we discover that Mlle. Alajmo was born in the year of grace 1832, at Palermo, the capital of Sicily, and therefore claims compatriotism with Bellini and Pacini. Being gifted with musical predilections, her career commenced early, and, we are bound to add, in common justice to her biographer, against the wishes of her parents. She made her début at Florence in one of Pacini's operas, and obtained a success which quickly inflamed the Tuscan mind. Her subsequent career was one of triumph, and her admirers do not hesitate to compare her in a dramatic point of view with Rachel and Ristori. From the operas in which Mlle. Alajmo has made her best successes, we should judge that this praise, if a little extravagant, is not altogether unjust. There was something in it, or the director of the Académie Imperiale of Paris would not have tendered the artiste a permanent engagement. We are not well posted in this country on the home triumphs of Italian artists. In the general way musical opinion only ripens in New-York after an English Summer. In the present case and in some others we have the advantage of our cousins on the other side. There can be no sufficient reason why they should not take what we have done with, instead of insisting on the old plan of getting all the good artists first and sending them to us afterwards.

Our American managers in their contest for the Italian market have once or twice gained a decided advantage. For the rest we have only to add that Mademoiselle Alajmo's voice is described as a pure soprano of two octaves and a half; that like all artists of her class (the first) she is said to have a remarkable command of passionate expression and sentiment; that her personal appearance is all that the most fastidious swell could desire, and that she makes her first appearance to-night with the confident expectation of a great success. If it should turn out otherwise some of the best judges in the City will be disappointed, including the coffee-colored gentlemen from Cuba, who have recently enjoyed her career in the capital of the Queen of the Antilles.

At this time of the year Mr. Ullman has always one leg in Europe—taking long strides after artists. A protracted campaign can scarcely be expected from a general standing on one leg. It will cause no surprise, therefore, to hear that the season, although so promising, is destined only to last a single week. Hot and furious it will be, without doubt. After the excitement has subsided, we shall probably have to look to Strakosch for a continuance of our musical feast. The Western manager has secured the services of the piquante Piccolomini, and that archest of prima donnas will probably bid us farewell under his management. There may also be an opening for Max Maretzek, who is again in the field and eager for the fray. Philadelphia is to be the scene of this redoubted chief's initial operations, and no one would be astonished—certainly not himself—if he were to bring the war into New-York. He has good artists, headed by Mme. Gassier, and a new prima donna who is said to be excellent. For the moment, however, we have quite enough in the banquet which Mr. Ullman has provided, and perhaps more than enough in the problematic futures of the indomitable Maretzek and the persuasive Strakosch.

Politics in Kansas.—The Hon. F. P. Stanton has written a letter of considerable interest upon the organization of political parties in Kansas. He declares that he cannot act with the Republicans, nor with the Democrats as at present represented by the Administration. He believes not only that Kansas will be a free State, but that it ought to be, inasmuch as her climate, soil and other characteristics render it certain that free labor will be much the most profitable and advantageous. Mr. Stanton thinks it would be wise for the people of Kansas to forego all participation in the contests of political parties, and devote their attention to the task of securing admission into the Union, with entire control of their domestic affairs and on terms of equality with the other States.

End of the World—Parting Words.

The end of the world is announced for to-day Positively, there is to be no postponment this time. This poor old earth, bent with the sorrows of age, must make up its mind to die; or, live to belie the prophets who foretold its downfall. Certain devout believers have for months passed fortified themselves in the heart of Jersey, with all proper precautions against the judgment which they supposed to be impending over them, and certain to fall to-day. Their lives have been rendered as spotlessly pure as it was in the power of sinful men to render any life. Earthly pursuits have been forsaken by this expectant multitude. They have given themselves up to heavenly contemplations, have been baptized by ordained priests, have exhorted one another, prayed with devotion, sang hymns with ardor, and edited Second-Advent newspapers with a degree of zeal which would be affecting but for the delusion that wraps the columns in a mantle of mystery. It is a pity for these deluded people, many of whom are very excellent men and women, that so large a portion of valuable time, which might have been rendered exceedingly profitable to their families by the return that comes from the handiwork of honest industry, should have been so nearly wasted, though personally they may have improved somewhat by the discipline they have undergone.

Millerite delusions have occurred at two or three previous periods. Zealous believers in the figures that "cannot lie," but did not cipher up the truth, despite all the ingenious Bible-searching that Mr. Miller and his descendants indulged in, have gone through precisely the same curious stages of religious error as the community in Newark and its neighborhood, who are to be sadly disappointed on this particular Monday. The old story will be simply repeated. The deluded men in New-Jersey, and others, equally deluded, who may be scattered over the earth, will go back to their daily avocations to-morrow morning, feeling sad, no doubt, but yet by no means sorry that their thread of life remains uncut for a trifle longer. The phenomena of Second Adventism are very odd, but promise to lose some features of their singularity by frequent repetition. The fact is that this fine old Globe is by no means ready to give up the ghost just yet. It has a great deal of handsome work cut out, contains a very considerable number of veins of physical and mental richness that nobody has yet tapped, and is getting to be every day more interesting and jolly. We do not entertain the shadow of a doubt that the sun will come up at the usual hour to-morrow, and retire gracefully as usual; nor is it at all probable that the Newark brethren will regret the inevitable postponement of the day of general demolition.

The Apparition Steamer.—The Commercial Advertiser says that the Times, in commenting on the description of the Ocean Queen, given by that paper, "intimates that she is an old and condemned craft with a new name," &c. But all that the Times intimated was that if there were any such vessel as the Commercial described, her appearance in our waters was a very great mystery, as no such ship had been built here, nor in any other of our seaports. The Ocean Queen proves, as we suspected, to be a marine Mrs. Harris. There is no such vessel. The description in the Commercial gives her the magnificent dimensions of 4000 tons; and this enormous bulk was reduced on Saturday, by an imaginative cotemporary, to 2830 tons. But the facts of the case are, that the Queen of the Ocean, built in 1857, by Mr. Westervelt, and originally intended for the Pacific, has been purchased by Commodore Vanderbilt for his Havre line, and is registered at the Custom-house 2,000 tons. She is undoubtedly a very good ship of her class, but a very different sort of a vessel from the one described by the Commercial.

Amusements.

Academy of Music.—Mr. Ullman announces a brief season at this house, commencing to-night. The opera selected for the occasion is Bellini's favorite one of "Norma," with Mlle. Alajmo—a prima donna new to our stage—as the heroine. The general distribution is good including the names of Stefani, Morelli and Mme. von Berkel.

Laura Keene's Theatre.—"The Midsummer Night's Dream," at this house, enters on its second week to-night. The audiences were densely packed during the past week, and those who purpose seeing Miss Keene's admirable production would do well to secure seats in time.

Theatre Francais.—There will be an extra performance at this house to-night—the fourth and last of La Grace de Dieu.

Niblo's Theatre.—Shakespeare's tragedy of "Antony and Cleopatra" will be produced here to-night, with Mrs. Julia Dean Hayne as Cleopatra, and Mr. Eddy as Antony.

Wallack's Theatre.—Mr. Wallack appears to-night in his famous character of Don Cæsar de Bazan, in the play of that name. The piece is a favorite with the public and will undoubtedly insure a succession of fine houses.

Metropolitan Theatre.—Tom Taylor's comedy of "Masks and Faces" will be produced at this house to-night, Miss Davenport appearing as Peg Woffington, and the leading members of the company in the other characters.

Bowery Theatre.—"Gotham, or Fast Life Now-a-Days;" "Pongo, the Intelligent Ape," and "Norah Creina" are announced here to-night.

National Theatre.—The Irish drama of "O'Nolan's Vow;" the petite comedy of "A Husband at Sight," and the piece called "False Colors," are promised by the enterprising manager of this establishment.

Barnum's Museum.—"Our Irish Cousin" is still the attraction at this house.

Wood's Minstrels.—The best of minstrelsy and the funniest of burlesques are the staple managerical commodities at this temple of the Ethiopean muse.

Letter from Ex-Secretary Stanton on Kansas Politics.

From the Herald of Freedom.

Lecompton, Tuesday, April 12, 1859.

G. W. Brown, Esq.—Dear Sir: Yours of the 9th inst. was received yesterday.

I have had little time to consider the important subject upon which you seem desirous of eliciting my views. But it has not been customary with me to conceal my views, and I can, therefore have no objection to stating them briefly, although I may not claim for them the weight to which the results of matured reflection would be entitled.

You are not mistaken in supposing that I concede the point that Kansas will be a Free State. I go further, and admit that her best interests require the exclusion of Slavery from her borders. My experience of this climate has convinced me that the Territory is better suited to free labor, and that the prosperity of the community will be greatly promoted by adopting that system. In exercising her undoubted right to become a Free State, it does not follow that Kansas will thereby indicate hostility to the institutions of any existing State, or to the fundamental principles of State sovereignty, upon which our Confederacy is founded. She will but claim her rightful equality in the Union, disdaining to enter it upon any terms which would deny to her the supreme control of her own local and domestic institutions.

It ought not to be forgotten that Kansas now rests under the odious discrimination affixed upon her by the terms of the act of Congress, passed on the 4th day of May last, usually known as the English law. By the provisions of that act, she was authorized to enter the Union with the Lecompton Constitution; while, if she should reject that fraudulent and hated instrument, she was subjected to conditions which have not heretofore been required of any other new State, and which were, doubtless, intended to obstruct and delay her admission. To the eternal honor of the people of Kansas, they refused to enter the American Union as a sovereign State with a Constitution not of their own choice, although it was sanctioned by the Federal Government, and attempted to be enforced by all the powers of an Administration falsely claiming to be Democratic. Kansas indignantly rejected the offer of power and independence, which would have been obtained only by a sacrifice of popular rights, and by a gross violation of the principles of the Union into which she was invited to enter. She has the glory of having contributed to the preservation of the Federal Constitution, by spurning the advantage which she might have derived from a disregard of its most sacred provisions.

In the organization of parties in this Territory, (and I believe, also, in the Union,) these important facts cannot be overlooked. You are right in supposing that I am not prepared to join the Republican Party, but, at the same time, I feel compelled to say that, without a complete reorganization, and an utter abandonment of the heresies and treacheries of the Buchanan Administration, I cannot coöperate with the so-called Democratic Party. The principles of Popular Sovereignty—the right of the people of any State of this Confederacy, old or new, to adopt or reject a proposed Constitution, and to determine the character of their own institutions—is so fundamental in its connection with all my notions of Democracy, that I cannot recognize the legitimacy of that organization which could deliberately violate that principle.

Kansas is not yet a State of the Union. Her admission may be opposed on the ground of her failure to comply with those humiliating prerequisites which, it cannot be denied, were adopted by those who claimed to represent the Democratic Party. In this state of things, can the Democrats of Kansas blindly unite themselves to the party which has heretofore thus sought to degrade the Territory, and which may hereafter insist upon maintaining and enforcing that Act of degradation? Until Kansas shall become a State, we can have no direct agency in the government of the Union, and no efficient power in politics. It is no part of our duty—it is not even our privilege—to participate in the management of federal affairs. Why, then, should we busy ourselves in preparing for contests in which, possibly, we shall not be able to engage at all? Our first and most important interest is to secure the acknowledgment of our rights—to undo the wrong which has been done—and to vindicate the principle of popular Sovereignty which has been so shamefully violated in our own recent history. The Republican Party has not heretofore professed to favor that principle; and the Democrats, while professing it, have utterly disregarded it in their treatment of Kansas, and some of them are even now proposing Congressional intervention, in the shape of laws for the protection of Slavery in the Territories.

You will readily infer from what I have already written, that I am opposed to the organization of parties in this Territory upon the political questions which are discussed in the States. It is by no means certain that the present organizations will be permanent there. Everything seems to be in an unsettled condition, and I can see no good reason why we should enter the stormy arena of party politics, at least until we shall have attained a position which shall enable us to act a part in the drama.

I have carefully examined the Big Springs Platform of 1855, of which some time ago you gave me a copy. Its principles are liberal and just. Now that the Free-State Party is acknowledged to be in the ascendant, and is preparing for its final triumph in the adoption of a State Government according to its own views, it would be a noble exhibition of magnanimity and moderation, if, regardless of all the indignities and wrongs it has suffered at the hands of its opponents, it should still adhere to the principles avowed at the commencement of the great struggle. It seems to me that the adoption of the principles avowed at Big Springs, and the incorporation of them in the Constitution of the State of Kansas, would be an object worthy of the coöperation of all patriotic men in the Territory, and, for the present, might well put in abeyance all the ordinary subjects of party discussion and contest. Very respectfully yours, &c.,

FRED. P. STANTON.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

EASTER SUNDAY.—The happy Easter season is not duly honored in New-York, we fear, with many colored eggs, white doves and multitudinous clangour of bells, as it is in the older cities of the older world. Our children do not dabble like those of Europe and the South, for weeks beforehand in dyes of all kinds; our steeples do not rock like those of Italy and England with brilliant jobilations on the holy morning of the Resurrection Day. Pfingster, the German "feast of gladness," is rather a poetic than a practical fast as yet with the descendants of the Netherlands and English Protestants. But the Easter festival, like all the other fasts and feasts of the ancient Church, has been gaining steadily in general observance among the people of New-York, during the past few years. On Palm Sunday, for instance, the most careless observer must have been struck by the numbers of children who were to be seen in our streets bearing their green branches fresh from the benediction of the altar; and yesterday the stately walls of Trinity Church rang with the glorious music of the full Easter service of the Anglican Church. The admirable and accomplished organist of Trinity Church, himself a musical graduate of Oxford, has trained a choir of boys to execute the ritual music of the Church service with all the precision and beauty which make the Cathedral ceremonies of Great Britain so impressive and so delightful to the foreign worshipper. The aisles of Trinity were yesterday crowded with a reverent and attentive throng of devout listeners, and it was not difficult in the lapses of the solemnly beautiful choral strains to imagine one's-self rather in some sweet and sunny spot of rural England than in the very core of busy Broadway and mammon-worshipping Wall-street. The moral influence hidden in this cultivation of the higher forms of devotional beauty can hardly be over-estimated, and every step in this direction deserves to be chronicled as a public gain.

THE JOCKEY CLUB HANDICAP.—It is stated in Porter's Spirit of the Times this week, that the Union Post Stake, at four-mile heats, and the Jockey Club Handicap, have filled. For the latter, the entries are, Agitator, Throg's Neck, Slasher, Sally Hampton, Zanoni, Bill Cheatham, Glencona, and the imported English colt and filly, who are to do what they can to try the reverse side of the problem of England vs. America, against American racers on an American track. In addition to this interesting feature of the Jockey Club Handicap, the high-mettled racers which are entered, represent the proud contending blood of Albion, Childe Harold, Glencoe, Zingaree, with Sweetmeat and Bolingbroke as the haughty sires of the two lately-imported strangers. These things, taken together, will doubtless make the handicap the best and most exciting race of the season. The weights will be published on the 1st of May, and declarations and forfeits are to be made on the 15th. For the Union Post Stake, at four-mile heats, there are now five entries. These are Slasher, by Childe Harold; Tar River, by Nicholas; Bill Dearing, by Albion; Gov. Wickliffe and Eaglis, by Glencoe.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE HON. JOHN DOHERTY.—The funeral of the late Hon. JOHN DOHERTY took place, Saturday afternoon, from his late residence No. 113 West Forty-third-street. Among the friends of the deceased who assembled at the house were Senators SCHELL, MARTIN and SPENCER, besides delegations from both branches of the Common Council. Several members of the City Inspector's Department, wearing a badge draped in mourning, were also present. After the remains, which were inclosed in a rosewood coffin, on which was a silver plate bearing the name and age of the deceased, had been viewed by the friends, they were removed to the Church of St. Colomba, in Twenty-fifth-street. After the services for the dead had been read by Father MCALEER, the procession moved to Calvary Cemetery, where the remains were interred. Mayor Tiemann, Ex-Mayor Wood, James B. Nicholson, Edward L. Donnelly, Judge Conolly, John Gibbons, J. M. Hilck and Daniel O'Connor officiated as bearers. Mr. Nicholas Walsh had charge of the general arrangements.

FOR EUROPE.—The steamship Vanderbilt, Capt. LEFEVRE, sailed on Saturday at precisely 12 o'clock for Havre viâ Southampton. She carries 253 passengers, nearly a million af dollars in specie, and three valuable horses for the Emperor of the French, shipped by J. N. BONAPARTE. Among the passengers are the Hon. JOHN SHERMAN and wife, of Ohio, the Hon. IRA HARRIS, wife and two daughters; the Hon. ROBERT MARSHAM, of England; Col. CIPRIANI, of the Sardinian Army, and Mons. LEGENDRE, the famous cornet a piston player, of the Ullman troupe. The steamer City of Baltimore, Capt. LEITCH, also left for Liverpool with 66 cabin and 170 steerage passengers, total—236, and $350,000 in specie. There was a very heavy blow prevailing from the south at the time these steamers left their dock, but they both steamed down the Bay in fine style. The City of Baltimore proceeded to sea without detention, but the Vanderbilt anchored at the Southwest Spit, where she remained until daylight yesterday morning.

DEPARTURE OF THE STEAMER PEI-HO.—This new steamer, built for Messrs. RUSSELL & Co., of Hong Kong, left on Saturday forenoon, at 11 o'clock, from the foot of Eighth-street, East River. She goes out in command of Captain THOMAS HARRIS, late of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company. She proceeds first to Southampton, where she is to be inspected by Mr. FORBES, the senior partner of the house, who is now in Paris, and thence goes to Hong Kong, stopping at Cape Verdes, Cape of Good Hope and Singapore. The following is a list of her officers: Commander, THOMAS A. HARRIS; First Officer, John P. Patterson; Second Officer, E. Robinson; Third Officer, Wilson Colton; Chief Engineer, Charles Bernard; First Assistant, Jesse E. Bunce; Second Assistant, Theodore Bernard; Third Assistant, A. J. Lameraux. Her purser and surgeon are at Hong Kong, awaiting her arrival. Her full complement of men, when navigating Chinese waters, will be seventy-five men.

PANIC AMONG THE TICKET SWINDLERS.—The conviction and sentence of SMITHURST, the ticket-swindler, who was sent to Blackwell's Island on Saturday, has created quite a panic among the ticket-swindlers. Their bondsmen, too, have become frightened, and on Saturday last two of the fraternity, GEO. WARD and MOSES PHILLIPS, who are under indictment, were delivered up by their backers and their bonds cancelled. FRANK HEATH was bondsman for WARD, and SAMUEL WILSON and PATRICK FALLEN for PHILLIPS. They were unable to get new bondsmen, and were consequently committed to the Tombs by Judge WELSH. It is presumed, however, that some of their cronies will come to the rescue before the sailing of another California steamer. WARD has boasted of clearing $2,000 on the sailing of one steamer, and a moiety of this sum would be an irresistable temptation to a professional bondsman.

CITY MORTALITY.—The City Inspector reports 405 as the number of deaths that occurred in the City during the past week, which is an increase of 4 as compared with the mortality of the week previous. Of the whole number, 200 were of 10 years and under, and 62 were inmates of public institutions. There were 121 deaths from diseases of the lungs and throat, and 86 from diseases of the brain and nerves. Of those who died, 249 were natives of the United States; 87 of Ireland; 37 of Germany; 12 of England; 5 of Scotland; 5 of France; 1 each of Spain, Switzerland, Italy, Norway, South America and British America, and 4 unknown.

LECTURES.—JOHN MCLEOD MURPHY, C. E., will repeat his lecture on "Tehauntepec—its inhabitants and resources," at Hope Chapel this evening, before the New-York Catholic Literary Association. The advantages and practicability of this route to the Pacific, in a commercial point of view, will be illustrated, and the progress which has been made for opening it, as a route of travel, will be explained. A lecture will be delivered this evening by Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, on "Wit and Humor," at Rev. Dr. Hatfield's church, 31st-st. and 9th-av.

SCALDED TO DEATH.—An inquest was held on Saturday at No. 276 Third-avenue, upon the body of a girl three years of age, named JULIA NEWMAN, who was scalded to death by accidentally upsetting a kettle of hot water upon her person. Verdict accordingly.

THE POSTPONED LAUNCH.—The launch of the steamship Yorktown, which was postponed on Saturday, on account of the southerly gale, will take place to-day, (Monday), at 2.30 P.M., weather permitting.

FOUND DROWNED.—The body of an unknown man was found in the Harlem River on Sunday afternoon, and brought to the shore. The Coroner will hold an inquest to-day.

NEW-YORK HOSPITAL REPORT.—There were 45 persons admitted to the New-York Hospital, during the past week; 37 discharged as cured, and 4 died.

Fires.

WEST EIGHTEENTH-STREET.—Between 3 and 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a fire broke out in the Greenwich pottery of WASHINGTON STREET, No. 261 West Eighteenth-street. The damage to the building and stock amounts to about $2,000; insured for $1,500 in the Lorillard, Pacific, North River and Citizens' Companies. The fire originated in one of the kilns.

WHITE-STREET.—At about 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, a boiler exploded at No. 6 White street, occupied by J. WYNE as a confectionery establishment. But little damage was done by fire. A man named AUGUSTUS VINCKEL, who was standing by the boiler at the time, was seriously injured, and taken to the Hospital.

RIVINGTON-STREET.—At 8 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in a varnish factory at the corner of Rivington and Norfolk streets, owned by TILDEN & NEPHEW. The damage will probably amount to $1,500; insured for $3,000 in a City company.

WORTH-STREET.—At about 9½ o'clock on Sunday morning a slight fire occurred in a tenement house No. 141 Worth-street. Damage trifling.

FALSE ALARMS.—There were three false alarms yesterday—two in the Third District, and one in the Sixth. The firemen were kept busy running.

Police Reports.

STABBING AFFRAY IN THE FOURTH WARD.—Last evening, about 8 o'clock, a row took place in a crib, No. 5 Roosevelt street, kept by John Dolan, and said to be a notorious place of resort for thieves. The difficulty occurred about the division of property, supposed to be stolen, one of the party named Patrick Conway claiming that he had not got his share. This led to words, and finally blows followed. Conway drew a knife and rushed amongst the party, stabbing one named Patrick Walsh, alias Madden, twice in the head, once in the neck and once in the arm, inflicting severe, though not dangerous, wounds. John Dolan, the proprietor, also received a cut in the arm. Officer Irving, hearing the noise, forced an entrance to the place and arrested the assailant, together with the injured parties, who were all locked up. An examination will be held to-day.

INGENIOUS ROBBERY.—On Friday morning last a young man about 20 years of age, medium height, light complexion and sandy whiskers, called at the office of Mr. Rodgers, house agent, No. 80 Fourth-avenue, to engage apartments. He was shown several rooms, expressed himself satisfied with them, and agreed to call again in the afternoon. He called at the appointed time, and Mr. Rodgers being absent across the street, his daughter invited the stranger into the office, while she went out to notify her father. On returning to his office, Mr. Rodgers found the stranger had left, and taken with him a mahogany cash-box, containing $213 75, substituting in its place an empty one of similar make. It is supposed that the rogue had taken a view of the box in the morning, and having furnished himself with a duplicate, watched the opportunity when Mr. Rodgers was out, to execute his purpose.

ARREST BY THE HARBOR POLICE.—About 8 o'clock on Saturday evening Officers Conell and Welch, of the Harbor Police, arrested two seamen named Chas. Williams and P. Dolan for stealing a large quantity of sugar from the schooner N. Boone, arrived yesterday and lying at a pier in Brooklyn. They were locked up for examination.

Newspaper Ghouls in Our Midst.

From the Sunday Times.

A ghoul, among the old fantasies of oriental romance, was a mythic demon who prowled about the graves of the dead at night, disinterred the mouldering corpses from their place of repose, and feasted on the hideous rottenness of human decay. The newspaper ghoul of the present day, however, is a reality, though he is not quite so patient as his ancient prototype. He does not wait for the actually defunct. He pounces upon the dying—or upon the defenceless whom he thinks ought to be among the dying—and gluts his ravenous appetite upon the agony he witnesses as he gnaws at the vitals of his victim. He is, in fact, an artist. He delights in the convulsive throes of the unfortunate creatures he privately stilettos, and he now and then indulges them with an extra stab in the back, that he may the better enjoy the excruciating anguish it occasions.

We were about to refer to the Evening Post, of this City, in illustration of our position. When it fancied, not long ago, that it had gotten Mrs. CUNNINGHAM's quivering heart between its teeth, and publicly munched it, day after day, with the gore dripping from its lips, it came very near the picture of a current ghoul; and perhaps its fearful outcry over the possible loss of such a luxury as the sight of Mrs. HARTUNG officially tortured upon the gallows does not lessen its peculiar claim, in this context, to our consideration; but your thorough ghoul is no respecter of persons, and the palate of the Post seems to have a lickerish gout chiefly for prey in petticoats. It banquets with a characteristic relish, to be sure, upon whatever may appear to be sufficiently infirm to render the hungry achievement a safe one; but then it fairly gloats over such a delicate bonne bouche as a guilty woman. It tears her dainty flesh to pieces with a vigorous voluptuousness that is truly picturesque, and smacks its moral lips over every writhing morsel with an unctuousness that is refreshing and exemplary.

The Evening Post would do, but Harper's Weekly, it strikes us, honestly merits the credit of being pronounced, par excellence, the Newspaper Ghoul of 1859. There is a slaughter-house piety about the demureness of its proceedings, when it once fastens its pictorial talons upon its unconscious object, that is eminently interesting. There is an abandon about its performance, a sort of "higher-law" independence of all the common restraints of decency and humanity, about the style in which it holds up to humiliation the "counterfeit presentment" of any party unfortunate enough to become a witness or a prisoner in a case of crime, that may be called thoroughly exciting. And then it bursts into the sacred privacy of a man's family relations—dashes wide open the ghastly chamber of his domestic wrongs—smears all over with flippant ribaldry his holiest affections, and tears down all the solemn barriers of charity and conscience—with a potential looseness and Christian self-complacency that is edifying beyond all description, and would be wonderful in anything but a Journal of Civilization.

Gen. Henningsen's Arizona Expedition.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The Atlas of to-day contains the following paragraph:

"THE ARIZONA EXPEDITION.—We understand that Gen. C. F. HENNINGSEN, President of the 'Arizona, Mexican and Central American Emigration and Colonization Association,' has been disappointed in his expectations, and will not be able to fulfill his engagements with the Trustees and members. It will, therefore, be impossible to carry out the arrangements proposed in the circulars which have been issued."

This is not so. Gen. HENNINGSEN has fulfilled his engagements, and, in consequence of the inability of the Association here to carry out the original agreement, and a material change by the Board here in the Constitution, after the death of the Hon. MIKE WALSH, Gen. HENNINGSEN writes to a member of the Executive Committee: "I and my friends have withdrawn from the Association, and have formed another, called the 'Henningsen Arizona Association,' with the same objects, same conditions, and are proceeding without interruption. All the stock issued will be replaced by that of the new Association." All the news received by his friends in this City has been encouraging.

Yours, &c., H.

Little Boys and Their Sorrows.

BY JULIA CARY RHEINHARDT.

What aileth thee, my brother—
What makes your brow so sad,
When all your jocund playmates
In this merry month are glad?
Reveal to me, your sister,
The trouble you endure,
And if within a sister's power,
I promise you a cure!

Outspake the gallant youngster:
"I cannot play nor rest
While, of all my young companions,
I alone am badly drest;
They pity me and pet me;
But their patronizing air—
Oh! 'tis torture, dearest sister,
And the hardest thing to bear."

"Your proud young spirit suffers,"
Said the sister, kind and true,
"But the grief is easy curing,
And I'll tell you what to do—
This very hour, together,
To the SMITHS we will repair,
And there buy a Spring and Summer suit,
SUCH AS A PRINCE MIGHT WEAR!"

The suit was bought, and Harry
Is now the gayest of the gay—
The foremost in his studies,
And the merriest boy at play.
Oh, mothers! con the lesson
Which these simple lines convey,
And in garments by SMITH BROTHERS made
YOUR LITTLE BOYS ARRAY!

Throw Physic to the Dogs!!

Said the Bard of Avon. Never was advice more wisely given—never more needed. Thousands, because they have a coated tongue, bad taste, poor appetite, constipated bowels, low spirits, confused head and headache, or are bilious, will take physic. Yet no man was ever cured of Dyspepsia by taking physic. Relieved for the time probably they may have been. Cured they never were and never will be. Aperients and pills only add to the general irritation, and physic calls for more physic. But

HUMPHREYS' SPECIFIC HOMEOPATHIC DYSPEPSIA PILLS

Phalon & Son's Cocoine.—The Public Press has so frequently and so emphatically expressed its high opinion of this inestimable preparation for the growth, preservation and embellishment of the hair, that anything additional at this time would seem to be superfluous. Attention is invited now only to make known that another article, made up by a Doctor (?) of Boston, is before the public, the merits of which, and its component parts, were tested in open Court the other day, to the complete satisfaction of all present. "The Doctor," after declaration under oath, that his Coco-aine was not an alcoholic wash, had the privilege of seeing one of his bottles opened, a portion of its contents poured out and ignited into a flame, giving unmistakable evidence that his deleterious mixture is composed principally of alcohol, thereby proving, if proof were needed, that the Cocoine of PHALON & SON is the only true article that can be used with safety and propriety as a regenerator of the human Hair. The public will, therefore, observe, and be on their guard. Nos. 197, 497 and 517 Broadway, and all Druggists.

OBITUARY.—Doctor JOHN COLLINS, one of the oldest and ablest physicians in Western New-York, died on the 27th of February, after a short and painful illness, of disease of the heart. This truly estimable man was born in Stonington, Conn., Nov. 19, 1781, and, after obtaining a thorough knowledge and practice of medicine, he removed to this State, and in 1823 settled in Hector, Tompkins County, where he resided and followed his profession until the time of his death, having reached the advanced age of 78. Being an eminent and skillful physician, he gained a reputation which led invalids to seek his counsel and trust their lives in his hands (so far as medical aid could reach) with entire confidence; being of a generous open-hearted disposition, the poor man ever found in him a friend, as he was always ready to answer their call; being calm and collected under the most trying circumstances, brave and ardent in his profession, his memory will be sanctified in the hearts of all who knew him. Having spent a life devoted to healing diseases of the body, not neglecting his own soul's salvation, he is now called by the Great Physician of Souls, from labors to rewards, leaving a large circle of friends to mourn a community's loss which is his gain.

N. B.—Mr. BONNER has the pleasure of announcing that CHARLES DICKENS, who is universally conceded to be the most popular author living, has been engaged to write a Tale expressly for the columns of the LEDGER; and that he is now at work upon it. Advance sheets of Mr. DICKENS' stories have at different times been obtained by American publishers, but this is the first time that a tale has been written expressly and solely for an American periodical by such an eminent author as Mr. DICKENS; and yet Mr. BONNER would not have the public suppose that he thinks there is anything very remarkable about this engagement—it is only part and parcel of his policy.

"ALL THE YEAR ROUND,"

THE NEW WEEKLY,
CONDUCTED BY
CHARLES DICKENS.

We have the pleasure of announcing that arrangements have been made with Mr. DICKENS by which his new publication, entitled "ALL THE YEAR ROUND," will be issued by us each week, simultaneously with its appearance in London, plates being taken from the English edition, and forwarded to us in advance of its publication there. The first number will appear in London and New-York on Wednesday, May 4.

ADDRESS.

Nine years of Household Words, are the best practical assurance that can be offered to the public, of the spirit and objects of "ALL THE YEAR ROUND."

In transferring myself, and my strongest energies, from the publication that is about to be discontinued, to the publication that is about to be begun, I have the happiness of taking with me the staff of writers with whom I have labored, and all the literary and business coöperation that can make my work a pleasure. In some important respects, I am now free greatly to advance on past arrangements. Those, I leave to testify for themselves in due course.

That fusion of the graces of the imagination with the realities of life, which is vital to the welfare of any community, and for which I have striven from week to week as honestly as I could during the last nine years, will continue to be striven for, "all the year round." The old weekly cares and duties become things of the Past, merely to be assumed, with an increased love for them and brighter hopes springing out of them, in the Present and the Future.

I look, and plan, for a very much wider circle of readers, and yet again for a steadily expanding circle of readers, in the projects I hope to carry through "all the year round." And I feel confident that this expectation will be realised, if it deserve realisation.

The task of my new journal is set, and it will steadily try to work the task out. Its pages shall show to good purpose their motto is remembered in them, and with how much of fidelity and earnestness they tell

THE STORY OF OUR LIVES FROM YEAR TO YEAR.
CHARLES DICKENS.

The first number of
ALL THE YEAR ROUND
Will contain the first part of
A NEW STORY BY CHARLES DICKENS,
To be continued from week to week during about eight months.

The American edition of "All the Year Round" will be put up in elegant tinted covers, and will be sold by the trade throughout the country at Five Cents per copy. The subscription price will be for one copy one year $2 50; two copies, $5; eleven copies, $20.

Periodical dealers will be furnished on liberal terms, and are requested to order at once through the usual channels.

LIFE AND DEATH ARE IN THE BALANCE.

There are two systems of medication—one experimental, and based on theory; the other uniform and positive, and founded on facts alone. The former belongs to the Medical Schools, the latter has reached its grand sanitary climax in RADWAY'S three Remedies—the READY RELIEF, the REGULATORS, and the RENOVATING RESOLVENT. There is not the slightest discrepancy in the operation of these medicines upon different persons affected with the same diseases. The result (always favorable) may be looked for with as much confidence as the opening of a bud or the rising of a star. They cannot fail, because the healing, life-saving principle is inherent in them, and must develop itself. The laws of cause and effect must be abrogated ere these Remedies can disappoint the hopes of those who trust in them. All Fevers, all disturbances of the Stomach, Liver, Lungs, Spleen, Kidneys, Bowels, all constitutional diseases, such as Scrofula, Pulmonary Affections, Chronic Rheumatism, Syphilis, Tumors, Cancer, Abscess, &c., and all disorders which assail the skin or the glands, are cured by one or other of RADWAY'S Remedies.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF never fails,—in fact, it is impossible for it to fail,—in instantly mitigating the most excruciating pain or aches, either internal or external.

During the heated term every person exposed to the hot rays of the sun should carry a small bottle in his pocket,—if head-ache or congestion threaten, a few drops of this immaculate remedy drank with water, and bathing the head with the Relief clear, will positively avert all attacks. RADWAY'S REGULATING PILLS are the most thorough, mild and safe purgative and Cathartic Pills in use.

R. R. R. Remedies sold by druggists and merchants everywhere.

From the Albion.

In this work-a-day world of municipal misgovernment, and promiscuous stock-jobbing, and impending wars, what can be more delightful than to pass for an hour quite beyond the dull domain of fact, into regions of fairy fun and mirth and passion, where nothing that we see or hear, recalls the things of earth; where "music and moonlight and feeling are one," in their charming unsubstantial grace? Shakspeare's play of the "Midsummer Night's Dream," is simply the most captivating of reveries. Without a single quality of historical truth, or dramatic consistency, it fastens the attention and fascinates the sympathy of the reader by its deliciously vague combination of realities in human character, and picturesque natural possibilities, with the "chartered license" of the imagination, and the most aerial visions of the mind. The peculiar beauty of this unrivaled composition always reminds me of those exquisite pictures of Claude, which while they exactly resemble and reproduce nothing in the heavens or on the earth, yet translate the noon-day dreamings of the inward eye into a truth which the heavens and the earth alike contribute to establish. Such for instance is Claude's "Landing of the Queen of Sheba" in the British National Gallery. Doubtless no Queen of Sheba, or of any other mortal realm, ever rode over seas so softly sunny; in a galley so golden-gleaming, high crested and fantastic. Doubtless no such temples, no such colonnades, ever greeted the morning of an earthly day. Doubtless those groups scattered along the stately steps, among the flower-wreathed vases, about the gleaming statues, are creatures not of "flesh and blood compact." But what signifies all this? The picture draws and keeps the gazer's eye; and fills the mind with thoughts and fancies that become "a joy forever."

In like manner the "Midsummer Night's Dream," with its splendidly audacious anachronisms; its confusion of legendary with historical Athens; its chaos of Grecian demigods and Norman Dukes; its quizzical sketches of vulgar self-conceit and senseless love-infatuations, is now what it was two hundred years ago, and will be through centuries to come, a treasury of liberated fancy to all thinking and feeling men; although the close and erabbed Gradgrinds of the earth will, I suppose, always secretly esteem it to be what Samuel Pepys, Esq., took heart of grace to call it in his Diary "a very mad play—the fullest of foolish nonsense I did ever see." Miss Laura Keene, then, deserves the new harvest of success I am so happy to believe she has already begun to reap from her production of this play, on a scale and in a spirit not unworthy its great author's memory.

"Shakesperean Spectacle," thanks to Mr. Charles Kean, has become a "fixed fact" in the contemporaneous drama. The notion that spectacular magnificence can only be brought upon the stage to hide dramatic poverty, is utterly futile, and so long as due regard is paid to the cast of any drama, the success of any management hereafter both will depend and ought to depend upon the skill and enterprise with which the scenic effects of the plays produced are looked after and secured. And, I am almost reconciled to the long life of that pertinacious creature, "Our American Cousin," by the reflection that his laborious earnings have probably enabled Miss Keene to do the justice she has so amply rendered to that dismal Yankee's delightful successor. Shakespeare has entered into the inheritance of Asa Trenchard, and it must be admitted is spending it right royally.

Shakespeare himself in the conception of the "rude mechanicals," and their play of "Pyramus and Thisbe" has virtually protested against the stage poverty of the old-fashioned legitimate drama. Snug the joiner's device for representing moonlight by leaving a casement open in the hall where the play is to take place; and Bottom's notable notion of "bring in a wall," by making "some man or other present wall, having some loam or some plaster, or some rough cast about him to signify wall," and opening his fingers as a cranny through which Pyramus and Thisbe may whisper, are simply satire, upon just that sort of clumsy expedients for which Miss Keene has substituted the witchery of the scene-painters and the machinist.

In the main, the scene-painter and the machinist have done their devoir. As I have already said, the whole piece is a charming chaos of anachronisms, and if Shakespeare could overleap twenty centuries to make Theseus a Norman duke, Miss Keene may be allowed to plant this Duke Theseus midway between these two extremes of history, in the marble-columned and magnificent city of Pericles. The view of Athens, crowned by the Acropolis, though rather too roughly painted, is well-conceived, and may easily be improved to all the effect it was originally designed to produce. The English character of the woodland glade, in which Titania holds her revels and befools herself to the top of Puck's irreverent bent is quite in keeping with the purely English character of the fairies themselves. The mystical diorama of the shifting-scenes, that make the dreamy passing of the soft Midsummer Night, is very happily developed; and the moonlit glimpses of wide water-views are especially striking. I have rarely seen the glancing lustre of rippling water more felicitously rendered on any stage. Meanwhile, the delicate and unearthly tone of the play is excellently supported, and brought out by a judicious administration of Mendelssohn's truly fairy-like music. The discretion with which this part of the entertainment is managed, is not the least creditable feature of the performance.

Of the cast I must speak somewhat more reservedly, though it is a very fair and respectable one. With the exception of Nick Bottom no part in the play really admits of very effective dramatic realization. The human beings go far to justify Puck's sarcastic exclamation, "lord what fools these mortals be!" and that fairies are creatures of too ethereal a mould to be defined by flesh and blood with perfect success. The ladies Hermia and Helena are prettily and appropriately represented, the one by Miss Stevens, the other by Miss Ada Clinton. The latter lady as Helena is particularly pathetic, earnest and natural. Mr. Couldock makes the best Theseus that circumstances will permit. Mr. Sothern is a dreary Lysander. Mr. Blake at least defers to Shakspeare and takes Nick Bottom as the master made him, for which he deserves no slight praise; but his conception of the part is somewhat too dry. The Bottom of Shakspeare is a fellow not without a rich humor of his own beneath all his vanity, blundering, and pompous vulgarity.

Miss Keene's rendering of Puck is grotesque, weird and whimsical, as the whole is a brilliantly-imagined and carefully executed piece of characterization. Miss Couldock makes an admirable Titania; Miss Macarthy a somewhat over-stately and splendid Oberon. Take them for all in all, then, we may look upon the parts as well-filled, and the whole play as worthy of the success it is doubtless destined to achieve.

From the Leader.

We promised to expend a considerable amount of enthusiasm over the production of the "Midsummer Night's Dream, at this theatre, this week. The "enthusiasm" is "unavoidably deferred." It is unreasonable to expect the development of any such sensation, when the unfortunate critic has only been able to see portions of the piece, occupying a standee seat, with a wilderness of heads intervening, and indefinite thousands appropriating all the sentiment and all the music before it reaches the "standing-room." In other words, reaching the theatre at any time later than an hour before the rising of the curtain, any night during the week, there has been no possibility of finding either a seat or standing room within hearing of the stage. So far as we have been able to judge, in perspective, the "Midsummer Night's Dream" is gloriously put upon the stage, with a lavishness of splendor, and yet with a truth to costume and chastity of taste, which few others than the fair manageress of this theatre have ever attained. Satins and velvets, laces and gauzes, silver and gold embroideries—jolis jambes and other things of that sort, gorgeous tropical scenery—all seem to be lying and flying around in a profusion that is bewildering, and we are bewildered. When to these is added the lazy, drowsy music of "Ein Sommernacht straum," as interpreted by Tom Baker, what is the reason that any of us should not go off into fairy land, any evening, and have a "good time" of it? What? Simply the fact that the seats are all taken at our hours, and that office stools are not yet en regle. When we get nearer the stage we shall comment at length upon the acting, which we can now only speak of distantly. Miss Keene cannot be anything else than a very charming woman. She is bewitchingly nimble and mischievous. Miss Wells has never appeared to better advantage than as the Queen of the Amazons, and the same may be said of Miss Macarthy as Oberon. Miss Stevens makes a charming Hermia, whom any Lysander might have been glad to run off with; and Miss Ada Clifton (who has just joined the company, to which she is an acquisition, and whom all will gladly welcome back to the stage where she won her best reputation) makes an equally fine Helena, whom no Demetrius has any right to run away from. Mr. Couldock makes a dignified Theseus, Mr. Southern a very pleasant Lysander, Mr. Levick a rather snobby Demetrius. Of the "hard-handed men of Athens," there has been a good deal of controversy in town respecting the Bottom of Mr. Blake—one insisting that he has plenty of pluck but no bottom, and another that he has any quantity of the latter, as shown sometimes in Jesse Rural and Mark Meddle. A third suggests that he has now reached the lowest round of low comedy, having come to the bottom of it. A fourth suggests that his Bottom is raw, by which we suppose he means unfinished. We shall reserve our opinion. Quince and Flute are well looked and well acted by Messrs. Varry and Peters, and the other comic characters very creditably. All these impressions are taken, it should be remembered, through a spy glass. We may change some of them when we come nearer. Meanwhile, the production is the greatest managerial success we have ever witnessed.

Dress Circle Seats may be secured Ten Days in advance. Doors open at 7 o'clock; to commence at 7¾ precisely.

HYATT'S PATENT LIGHTS.
A CARD HAVING BEEN ISSUED TO THE PUBLIC

By parties who frankly confess that they do not pay me for my invention, I avail myself of this opportunity to advertise the names of those who do. The following persons, only, are licensed under my patents in this City:

George R. Jackson & Co.
J. B. & W. W. Cornell & Co.
S. B. Althause & Co.
Ingalls & Case.
Theodore Hyatt.

The law is, that a person who purchases or uses a patented article is equally liable for infringement with the maker of it. The "makers" having fairly notified the "users" of their intention not to pay, the "users" have only themselves to blame if I collect my tariff of them—as I shall certainly do. THADDEUS HYATT.

HUNDREDS OF THE UNFORTUNATE are disappointed of a cure by not calling on DR. HUNTER at first, the Hunterian Dispensary, No. 3 Division-st., New-York City. Established in 1834, for the Preservation of Human Life. PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—Dr. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated not less than fifty thousand cases, without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; it roots out the poisonous taint the blood is sure to absorb unless this remedy is used. Book for nothing, that treats of the evil effects of early abuse and indulgence, is embellished with elaborate colored engravings, portraying every feature and phase of disease, exposes the fallacy of the ordinary modes adopted for the cure of local as well as hereditary maladies, and gives the only safe and infallible remedy for expunging every trace of the virus from the system.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE BROADWAY RAILROAD, OF BROOKLYN.—The undersigned, a Committee appointed to examine into the Financial condition of the Broadway Railroad Company, as well as their future prospects, report—

That they have examined the books of the Company and find the following to be the condition of the Company on the 1st of April instant, to wit:

Stock Subscribed, $189,700.		Capital Stock, $200,000 00
Cash received on account stock subscriptions	$138,700 00
To be received on Stock subscriptions	51,000 00
Reserve Stock	10,300 00
Total	$200,000 00	—$200,000 00
Capital Stock		$200,000 00
Receipts from Passengers		7,441 43
Liabilities		6,919 59
Construction accounts to date	$81,162 91
Equipment account	47,023 20
Real Estate	14,979 83
Salary account	600 00
Office Expenses	458 52
*Stock Subscriptions unpaid	51,000 00
Reserved Stock	10,300 00
Running expenses of Stages during Winter	6,913 01
Cash on hand	1,923 55
Total	$214,361 02	—$214,361 02

*Of the subscribed stock unpaid, $40,000 is to be issued to the contractor, when his contract is complete.

The Company took possession of the stage-line on the 1st of October last, and the line on the route has suffered much during the last six months from the disturbed situation of the entire line of the road.

The Committee find the road about completed, and that it has been constructed with the following material, to wit: white and yellow pine and white oak ties and strings, spiked together at each tie with an iron spike ⅝ by 10½ inches, laid with American Iron Rail, of Cooper, Hewitt & Co.'s manufactory, screwed to the wooden structure at the ends, and every intermediate space of three feet with an iron screw ⅝ by 4½ inches, (known as a wood-screw.) There is also an iron plate, ¼ inch thick, 3½ by 9 inches, laid between the wood structure on the strings under the ends at each connection of the rails.

All the water-crossings where the streets are paved are laid with stone abutments, cement bottoms and iron covers let into the stone even with the surface of the street grade.

The road is nine miles in length, of single track, and every foot of the same paved.

The Committee believe the road constructed of the most approved kind of material, and in a manner which will insure durability.

On the 17th inst., on the completion of the double track, 8 cars were put on the road, making only 212 trips in the last four days, and the receipts have been $333 74 (being an average of $10 per car) per day, and carried 6,674 passengers. The number of cars will be increased to 14 within a few days, when it is believed the travel will increase in a greater ratio than that stated above.

The Company have made arrangements with the Long Island Railroad for hourly trains to and from East New-York to Jamaica, by which means passengers on that line from any portion of Long Island can be placed in the centre of the City of New-York from 40 to 60 minutes sooner than by any other mode of public travel now existing, and at Peck slip Ferry on the New-York side from 15 to 30 minutes sooner.

The Company have 14 cars and have ordered two more of large size to accommodate 80 passengers seated.

When the amount due on the stock subscribed shall be paid, and the avails of the reserve stock sold, the Company will be free from debt, and have surplus (after equipping for 4,000 passengers daily) of about $7,000.

The Committee consider the future prospects of the Company very flattering.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

BROOKLYN, April 21, 1859.

JAMES A. VAN BRUNT,
G. P. BERGEN,
WILLIAMSON RAPALJE,
WM. IRVING STEELE.

N. B.—By order of the Board of Directors, the President was authorized to dispose of the Reserved Stock at par.

Immediately after the above report was made public the $10,300 of Reserve Stock was sold as authorized by the Board.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before the Hon. Recorder Barnard.

The April Term of this Court closed on Saturday. Notwithstanding the sitting of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, which, through the action of the District-Attorney, at present tries the capital cases of murder, and the secondary cases of homicide, the disposal of other cases, such as felonious assault, burglary, grand larceny, arson, and the minor degrees of crime, was very large; and the Recorder, in dismissing the Grand Jury, assured them that they had transacted more business than any Grand Jury had done for the last three years,—a compliment to that august body, but unencouraging to the City, in view of the increase of crime which is thereby implied. In the cases which have been tried during the past term, the Recorder has done his utmost to make an example of the criminals, refusing in every instance to exercise any leniency, on the application of interested counsel. The following was the work of Saturday:

The cases of Ellen Lynch, John Lynch and John D. Plomer, charged with homicide, were transferred to the Court of Oyer and Terminer.

Patrick Burke, who pleaded guilty to assault and battery, was allowed to go on paying a fine of $10.

Christopher Johnson and George Moore, convicted of an assault upon Solomon Harris, with a recommendation to mercy, were fined $2 each.

Peter Duffy, convicted of an assault with a club on a man named Clark, was sentenced to the City Prison for 20 days, and to pay a fine of $25.

David Hanford, who pleaded guilty of forgery in the fourth degree, in passing forged notes on the National Bank of this City, was arraigned for sentence.

Mr. Ashmead asked a suspension of judgment in the case, and read the affidavits of the complainants in support of his motion.

The Recorder denied the request, and sentenced the prisoner to the Penitentiary for three months.

Michael Corcoran, a small boy, who was charged with burglary, was arraigned, and the Recorder said that, upon the recommendation of the Grand Jury, he had determined to send him out West, so that he would reform.

John Kernan, who pleaded guilty of an attempt at burglary, was sentenced to the Penitentiary for one year.

Herman Isaacs, charged with receiving stolen goods, was sentenced to the Penitentiary for four months.

John Kendrick pleaded guilty to forgery in the 4th degree, and sentence was deferred.

Abraham Buckley was sent to the State Prison for five years, on a plea of grand larceny.

Paul Ritter, convicted of grand larceny, was sent to the State Prison for three years.

Henry Smithurst, charged with ticket swindling, was sentenced to the Penitentiary for six months.

After hearing some motions, the Court adjourned sine die.

A Greater than Hobbs.

The progress of the age in the improvement of every description of mechanical work, is not better exemplified than in the department of Bank and Safe Locks. There is one description of these safeguards which we have been permitted to examine closely, and which has been clearly explained to us as far as exhibition can be explanation; to understand the whole interior working in a short time would be impossible—for, it is the result of some ten or twelve years close application on the part of the inventor. We refer to ISHAM'S BANK and SAFE LOCKS, manufactured at New-Britain, Conn., and for sale in Boston, at the agency, No. 1 PHŒNIX BUILDING—in New-York, at No. 52 Beekman-street.

These Locks are patented in the United States and Europe. They afford absolute certainty against marking, picking, pressure, powder and all the devices known to the most experienced burglars. Each Lock is capable of several millions of changes. They are greatly admired for their simplicity and convenience—have no springs and insure perfect action. For securing vault doors the "ISHAM BANK LOCK" is a complete safeguard. His "SAFE LOCK" also is used on vault doors, and is the most perfect Lock in the world for Burglar-proof Safes and Steel Chests, as they are unpickable, and have no KEY-HOLE, cannot be penetrated by even the DUST of any explosive substance. It is made both with and without a key, as purchasers direct.

This Safe Lock is believed to be the only Lock in the World without a Key Hole and having a Key! The keys of either of these locks are beautiful, new and unique in style, and very convenient in form. They can readily be changed in a few seconds, and the locks conform to all the changes in the keys with perfect accuracy.

Certainly these locks are safe if there can be safety in this world in anything, and the proprietors are so well convinced of their entire security that they cheerfully offer to put $3,000 behind one for any picker's reward. This lock cannot be described in detail in to-day's paper. It is like a watch in its beautiful finish—like walls of steel in its strength. The large number of Banks and other institutions where valuables must be kept, that have already given the Isham Bank Locks a preference over all others, is a strong evidence of their worthiness. Clerks, Cashiers, and Presidents, may feel perfectly secure with them for keepers. None more impregnable could possibly be found. These ISHAM LOCKS have already superseded many of the old favorites. Truly not only is the New-Britain Bank-Lock Company fortunate, but Bank officers and stockholders also, that the services of such a man as THOMAS TRACY have been secured for foreman, who has certainly shown himself to be a man greater than Hobbs, for not only can he pick the Hobbs Lock but he can pick others which defied the skill of the man who astonished Europe and America with his lock-picking. The lock long known as BACON'S Duplex (YALE'S patent) was too much for Hobbs, but now has yielded to the superior knowledge and ingenuity of THOMAS TRACY, who has the supervision of the New-Britain Bank Lock Manufactory. In the possession of the proprietor and agents of the Isham Bank Locks may be found certificates from the officers of the Suffolk Bank, manager of the Boston Clearing House, and the Cashier of the Hide and Leather Bank, of this city, certifying that, on the 11th of March last, BACON'S best Duplex Bank Lock, being on the vault door of the Hide and Leather Bank, was completely locked in their presence, that Mr. TRACY was then introduced, who possessed no previous knowledge of the lock or keys, and in less than three hours the vault door was shown to these gentlemen open, the keys being in the possession of the Cashier the whole time occupied by Mr. TRACY in picking the lock. The Company, also, have in their possession similar certificates, signed by the officers of two of the principal banking houses of Chicago. These operations of entire success make it obvious that this foreman can readily pick any of the Duplex Bank Locks, (YALE'S patent,) and that he is enabled to give to the world new and valuable light upon the important subject of Bank Locks. Such is the ease with which this gentleman picks the Bacon Duplex Bank Lock that he makes no more noise than is done in the use of the key, and leaves no scratch upon the lock to mar its ordinary working. And so complete and simple is his plan that when once seen a mere novice can copy it. For the safety of banks Mr. TRACY has so far kept his secret from the public, and thus from burglars. For this act, which has "headed off" burglars and saved vast sums of money from robbery, we feel that Mr. TRACY far more deserves to be canonized as a public benefactor than many who gain this distinction.

Of course bankers and others having charge of valuables will not fail to examine the above-named locks and certificates.—Boston Post.

MONDAY, April 25—A. M.

The past week was one of continued and unusual excitement on the Stock Exchange. The daily operations were large and active on the Share list—one-half nearly being in New-York Central alone—the fall, after repeated fluctuations through the week, being 3½ ⅌ cent. The following table affords a fair index to the movement of the General Market, the inside figure representing the closing sales of Saturday week, and the outside the sales of Saturday afternoon last, after the printed list of the Second Board:

The heavy break down in New-York Central occurred on Tuesday afternoon, the price of that day falling full 2 ⅌ cent., to 74. The sales of the afternoon were variously reckoned at from 7,500 to 12,000 shares, a large number of private settlements being made outside the Board room. This sudden movement on the part of one of the previous and principal buyers changed the position of the Stock on the Street very materially. It was followed, however, by numerous, and in the aggregate large, purchases for out of town and other outside orders, but these were met in turn on Friday and Saturday by a very eager disposition on the part of speculators for the fall to put out fresh contracts. The party being well fortified in point of ability by the heavy differences collected early in the week, moved with extraordinary boldness. The Street sales on Friday, after the orders of the morning had been filled at the Board at 74¾ ⅌ cent., fell to 73½. In the afternoon they returned to 74@74¼, and on Saturday morning orders came in again at 74@73⅞. After the Board, the sellers were numerous, and the price was followed down precipitately to 73@72⅞, closing 73 at 4 o'clock. The actual certificates of the Stock on the Street, as the basis of these immense and rapidly-changing operations, were partially increased by the bona fide sales of 1,500 or 1,800 shares for Eastern account noticed in our last weekly review, delivered on Monday, though these were absorbed by retransfer to the country, in smaller certificates, by the close of business on Saturday. The sale referred to had much to do, perhaps, with the break in the Stock on Tuesday, though other encouragements to sell, after this, were found in the previous success in bearing down the Stock from 80@81 ex-dividend, through March and April, and in the use made of the war news and the talk of the reduced compensation for the Spring business on all the trunk lines. In reference to the last we are not aware that any of the Central management have expressed any serious dissatisfaction at the working of the recent independent change of policy on their own line, deliberately and unanimously made at their own instance, nor have we heard anything like complaint from the seat of the Company at Albany as to the success which has thus far attended their April business. We find too, in reference to the Philadelphia stock sales, that the Pennsylvania Central interest has not suffered materially in market value from the extension of that Pandora's line of railway, wrangling and mischief, the "St. Nicholas compact." The sales on Saturday were at 83¾ @ 83½ ⅌ cent. for a six ⅌ cent security, quite as much interested certainly against "ruinous competition," as the New-York eight ⅌ cent Central shares, selling down to 73 ⅌ cent. Indeed, the greatest, if not the only lively concern constantly expressed on this subject is from sources more likely to be satisfied with the one-sided gossip and varied assertions of the Street, than to seek information where the practical truth could be learned, in reference to the prospects and actual business of the four trunk lines, three of which are now profitable and dividend-paying stocks, and not likely to be less so on the certainty of an increased passenger traffic this summer, and the probable return of good crops in their season.

The Western Shares have sympathized in most instances with the decline in the leading speculative Stock. The heaviest fall is in Michigan Guaranteed; the lightest in Rock Island. Both these moved actively through the week; Rock Island having, apparently, a strong support on outside orders. The fluctuations in Galena, Michigan Central, Toledo and Illinois Central were very marked—the last named feeling the influence of the late decline in London. Hudson and Harlem are also depressed, though not to the extent of the other stocks. In Harlem Preferred an active business continues, at 40@40½ ⅌ cent. Reading comparatively resists the general decline, though 30@60-day contracts were again made for the Bear account at 50@49¾, while the cash stock sold at 51¾@50¾ ⅌ cent. In Pacific Mail and Panama the fluctuations rule in favor of the Bull account, and both were strong on Saturday, and the Mail shares advanced in the afternoon to 89 per cent. The California business, both in passengers and express, and other freights has seldom been so active, and fair remuneration is found by the Mail Company against a competition equally "ruinous," if we are to believe the ardent partisans of the Vanderbilt system of breaking down all steamship property, with the emulation in railway traffic. Neither, by the way, is anything very new in this country, and both interests when well managed, have at least occasionally, subsisted and prospered without "subventions" or "compacts," and the public been infinitely better accommodated.

The Federal Stocks were dull through the week. The New Fives 104¼ for the coupon bonds, and 104¾ for the registered certificates. State Stocks steady at the close. The war news from Europe has influenced some fresh contracts in Missouris for the Bear account. Virginias, Tennessees and North Carolinas comparatively scarce. The Railway mortgages dealt in at the Board are generally firm and in fair investment demand. The plain and fourth mortgage bonds of the Erie Company are lower, and so are the La Crosse Land Grants.

The movement of Foreign Trade at this port the past week was again active in the Import entries, and in the Export of Domestic Produce and Bullion. The total Importation, including the Dry Goods table in our last paper, is $5,683,802, against $3,643,873 the same week last year. The general merchandise list embraces $1,108,000 in Sugar and Molasses. The clearances of Domestic Produce are $1,460,059, against $1,286,359 same week last year; and of Bar Gold and other Specie, $1,495,083, of which $1,291,000 went out on Saturday by steamers Vanderbilt and City of Baltimore. The same week last season the Specie export was only $15,850, owing to the lower ruling of Exchange and the comparative dullness of trade. The Customs paid into the Sub-Treasury at this port during the week amount to $608,000 in cash, and there was also received, in payment, Treasury Bills to the value of $29,568. The Sub-Treasury balance on Saturday afternoon stood $6,894,810, against $7,079,621 at the close of the previous week. The receipts and out-go of Gold by Express and coast steamers were in favor of the Banks, though to what precise extent we have no means of ascertaining. The business in this way, however, is reported to be active, and the probability is that the Bank Average of Specie on the statement to be made up to-day will not fall below $25,000,000, notwithstanding the heavy export movement. The last average ($25,478,107) was a rising one, at the beginning of the week, and as the Bullion for Europe only went out at the close, the average to-day will be a falling one. The Discount line is not expected to vary materially, though the Money Market through the week was sufficiently easy to induce the belief that the Banks as well as private lenders were competing for short paper and demand securities at the moderate ruling of the past six or twelve months. The Deposit line is of course affected by the heavy remittances to Europe, though on the other hand the balances from the South and West are believed to be accumulating. Exchange on England rules 109⅞@110 ⅌ cent. at 60 days, and 110½ ⅌ cent. at sight. A number of the large Importing firms are shipping Bullion direct, in preference to the extreme rates for 60-day bills, and others make choice of sight-bills of which there is an abundant supply. The New-Orleans Banks report increased balances of Exchange, owing to the heavy export of Cotton which, from all the Southern points, last week amounted to 109,000 bales.

According to the Custom-house returns of the Foreign Trade at this port, which we published in summary form, by months, a few weeks ago, the Import entries for nine months of the current fiscal year to March 31, were:

The above is the official quarterly summary as made up at the Bank Department for the Albany Journal. The Discount line is a little below that of the Winter quarter, Dec. 18. The amount due from Brokers is also $1,640,000 less. The small difference in Specie very nearly corresponds with the reduced balances due to other Banks. The movement upon the whole is quite steady, showing an aggregate difference of only $3,318,000 in a footing of three hundred millions. The head of the Department notices with pleasure the unusual promptness with which the present quarterly returns were sent in.

The New-Orleans Bank report of April 16, in the form which we usually copy, has not come to hand. We annex a summary from another source:

INDIA RUBBER GOODS.

CAUTION TO DEALERS IN ELASTIC FABRICS CONTAINING THREADS OR SHEETS OF VULCANIZED RUBBER.—The undersigned gives notice that he holds an absolute conveyance from Charles Goodyear of the exclusive right to use vulcanized rubber prepared according to said Goodyear's patent of June 15, 1844, in all elastic fabrics the elasticity of which is due to the shirring or corrugating the sheets or threads of such fabrics, and in all woven, braided, cemented or sewed fabrics, or such as are or can be covered or protected on one or both sides with substances other than rubber, and in all smooth, elastic shirred goods; and also to make and sell India-rubber threads of vulcanised rubber, and all threads or sheets of rubber which are or can be made or finished by union with or to be covered by fibrous substances. And he hereby gives notice that he is ready to supply the trade with all such fabrics at reasonable rates, and has a full stock now in store.

His attention has been called to an advertisement signed by William Judson, in which said Judson claims to be the owner of the right to import and sell such goods.

The undersigned is satisfied that this pretence on the part of said Judson is a fraud upon the public, and is made for the purpose of injuring his business. Said Judson has never exhibited his pretended titles to any Court, or to the public, and he does not afford the undersigned any opportunity of commencing any suit against him in order to test these titles. Charles Goodyear could not give any valid titles to said Judson, or to any one else, after the titles he had conveyed to the undersigned. The question decided by Judge Ingersoll, in New-York, upon a preliminary motion and partial presentation of the case, was not decisive of the merits of the title of the undersigned, and the card published by said Judson shows that the Court was imposed upon by a pretended title in a third party, which said Judson now claims to have been in himself for the last six years.

The undersigned therefore cautions all dealers in articles of the above descriptions, containing vulcanized rubber, that no such goods can be lawfully sold in this country without his license and stamp, and that he shall prosecute, to the extent of the law, all persons infringing upon his said rights. Orders solicited, and rights to use guaranteed, by HORACE H. DAY,
No. 23 Cortlandt-st., New-York.
